POLITICAL NOTES.

—The Cincinnati Enquirer gives evidence of great distress in consequence of the fact that Carl Schurz has taken the stump for Hayes.

—"Oh, that election were to-morrow!" said Sam Cary last week, in view of the tide now steadily setting against him and his party.

—If the Democrats can do anything to make times better, as they promise, why didn't they do it in the panics of 1837 and 1857, when they were in power?

—Senator Morton is reported in his home organ, the Indianapolis Journal, as being much encouraged by the outlook in Ohio. He feels confident that the Republicans will carry the State.

—"The character of Governor Hartranft for honesty, integrity and patriotism cannot be successfully impeached."
—[Francis W. Hughes, at the Pershing ratification meeting, Pottsville, Pa.

—It is stated that Senator Thurman declared in the Democratic State Committee rooms at Columbus, that if they continued to push inflation within the party they would push him out.

—Governor Allen was disgusted with his Toledo audience when he was there. When he mentioned the name of his opponent, General Hayes, those treacherous Toledoans burst out with "thunders of applause."

—Governor Allen talks very loudly in public about the majority of 30,000 or 40,000, but in private he is more cautious. He is reported to have said to a delegation of Pennsylvania Democrats who asked him to come to their State and speak after the Ohio election: "Gentlemen, it is altogether too soon to talk of my going to Pennsylvania to take part in the canvass. Suppose I should be beat like h——l in my own State, would it be a pretty looking thing, making speeches in Pennsylvania?" This profound observation ended the conversation.

FORGIVE AND FORGET.

Even a good sentiment may be abused. Forgiveness is a noble attribute of character, but it does not imply forgetfulness. A man may forgive a wrong but he cannot well forget it. It is retained on his memory whether he wills it or not. He may write "forgiven" over it and show by his conduct that all trace of resentment has been removed, but the memory of the wrong remains, as if the record had been cut by a chisel on the enduring granite. Therefore, to talk of forgiveness and forgetfulness, as if they were synonymous terms, is to confound two distinct traits—forgiveness, which implies nobility of manhood, and forgetfulness, which implies mental imbecility.

Democratic orators are ringing the changes of this expression. They ask Republicans to "forgive and forget," yet they are very careful not to practice what they preach. They never forgive or forget. They go over the past and pick out each fault that a series of years may have developed. They hold it up for inspection; they gloat over it, as a rare piece of good luck to them; they overlook the many virtues and the mighty achievements of the Republican party, and condemn the granite pillar of justice that has sustained the nation through its fiery troubles, because close inspection has revealed, here and there, a few slight flaws on its polished surface. They hold up public men, who have served their country with distinguished fidelity, to scorn and contempt. They rake over the ashes of a dead past and exhume anything and everyting that can serve their partizan purpose. They arraign loyal men for their patriotic acts tenfold more bitterly than loyal men ever arraigned them; and then, after dealing all the deadly blows they can, and pouring out the vials of their wrath and vindictive hate upon the party that has done more for humanity, civilization, and national progress, than any other party known to history, they turn, with a "smile so child-like and bland," and ask the followers of this party to "forgive and forget."

Forgive and forget what? Republicans are ready to forgive the wrong-doers of the past, but they cannot forget their deeds. Neither can they forget those who stood bravely at the post of duty in the hour of trial. The effort to destroy the nation will be remembered as long as the heroic services of our citizen soldiery. Who can predict the time when these patriotic services will be forgotten? Out of the remembrance of the past we profit for the future. From the pages of history we gather wisdom that should make us better and stronger in the administration of government than those who have gone before us.

The American people may forgive Democracy for the trouble which it brought upon the nation, but they cannot forget their troubles, nor blot out the memory of the cost in blood and treasure, nor permit it again to return to power, to plague anew a people that have been redeemed from its thraldom.

Republicanism extends forgiveness wherever asked, and tenders it where it is not. But its mission is not to forget what has been done, but rather to remember it, whether it comes from evil or good, that the Republic may avoid in the future, by a clear knowledge of the past, those dangers which threaten its stability.

—The bill to prevent employers paying their employees in store orders was offered in the Legislature when Pershing was a member of the House. On April 9, 1863, when the bill came up, four members were found opposed to this just law, and they voted against considering it then. Pershing was one of these four! (See Legislative Record, 1863, page 798.) The bill came up again on April 10, and was passed. But, as usual when a bill the corporations did not want passed, was under consideration, Pershing "dodged." On the day this bill passed the yeas and nays are recorded 42 times, and Pershing's name does not appear once! He was ordered out of the House by his master, and he went! (See Leg. Recorder 1863, pages 842, 843, 844, 845, 846, 847, 848, 849, 850, 851, 852.)

THOSE WALNUT DOORS.

We are informed by a citizen of Harrisburgh that the Radicals (probably by order of the chief executive magistrate of the Commonwealth of Pennsylvania himself), have removed those famous walnut doors from the Governor's horse stable and replaced them by others! After the election the walnuts will no doubt appear again unless some enterprising Radical official shall steal them. A number of vouchers have also been discovered to have been stolen or removed from the Auditor-General's office, as there are no vouchers on file for certain warrants that were drawn! This whole matter, we are informed, will be thoroughly probed, and proofs will be presented establishing that a gross and monstrous fraud has been practiced in order to screen this piece of little villainy and folly from public observation.—Northumberland County Democrat.

We can imagine nothing more contemptible in politics than is contained in the above. Elcholtz knows as well as he knows anything that Governor Hartranft has not now and never had walnut doors to his stable. And probably after the election he will say the compositor made a mistake in putting the article in that shape—that what he meant to say was that Hartranft did NOT have walnut doors, and the compositor left the word "not" out! But isn't this whole twaddle about walnut doors and diamond shirt studs and brussels carpets, a humiliating confession of lack of principles, as well as brains on the part of the Democratic editors? They can find nothing to say against Hartranft's administration or character, and they coin a deliberate falsehood of this silly material, because they have no other ground of opposition. No decent Democratic editor makes pretense to believing the miserable story, and it is only in the lowest class of partisan journals that the preposterous lie finds a place.—[Ex.

The comments above we find in an exchange, but have mislaid the paper, so that we cannot give the proper credit. The walnut door story was started by the editor of the Watchman, of this place, and, like a great many stories set afloat by that sheet, had no foundation in fact. But the idea was not original with the editor of that paper, but was borrowed from a Massachusetts paper which they get in exchange. Democrats in Massachusetts, like everywhere else, will lie. What an editor away down East could know about Hartranft's stable doors, our readers can judge for themselves. What better evidence do we want that Governor Hartranft has made one of the best of Governors, when, after a service of one term, his opponents can find nothing more to bring against him than such a silly charge as this?

THE AMERICAN ALLIES OF VATICANISM.

Is there any organized sect in this country opposed to the American public school system, except that controlled by a Catholic priesthood, whose orders emanate from the Vatican? The answer is, "No." That reply cannot be gainsaid. Again, is there any organized political party more closely than any other affiliated with the priesthood that wages war on the common schools? The answer is affirmative. It is the Democratic party. There are Republicans who are also Roman Catholics. The lay-citizens of that faith are as patriotic according to their lights, as their fellows in other sects. But the Romish clergy are attacking the public school system with unwavering earnestness. From their standpoint they are entirely logical. Our war is not with them so much as with their allies, the Democratic party. Without that party, their fulminations, while not to be slighted, would be comparatively harmless. With it, "Vaticanism" is a dangerous power in this country. The latest example of this alliance has been seen in New Jersey. Amendments to the constitution of the State were recently pending there. They forbid the diversion of public moneys to sectarian purposes, under either educational or charitable pretenses. They also forbid the entrance of religious schools into the State system, or the transfer of free schools to any sectarian direction.

In Newark, Catholic priests fulminated from the altar against these propositions. At the polls the spectacle was presented of a religious struggle. Protestants of both parties being on one side, and the majority of the Democracy, Catholic, and of foreign birth, being on the other. A few Catholics voted against the priestly dictation. But the fact remains that everywhere the Catholic priests rely upon the Democracy, and that the Democratic leaders rely upon the priests. The alliance must have its reward, and that reward, for the Vatican, is the destruction of our State unsectarian public school system.

—To see a Democrat hugging a horse-chestnut tree, descanting upon the beauties of prohibition, and hic-jurrahing "Lija Browne packer'n Robert Oddly Penny," is a touching spectacle.

FACE TO FACE.

Just now the begging cry of the pushed and retreating Democracy is "men, not principles." We rather think we have the principles and the men both. We are willing, therefore, to join issue on both or either—on principles and men, or on principles alone, or on men alone, just as for the moment best suits the demoralized and disintegrating opposition. Hartranft today is stronger than his party, and his party is stronger than the Democracy. That is the situation of the field, and we can afford to be a little generous to our discomforted foe, whose only refuge, or defence even, now, is in tergiversation, contemptible prevarication, and the infinitesimal special pleading of the pettifogger.

We stand to-day on the record of our men, and place them face to face before the people.

Voters of Pennsylvania! shall the next Governor of this Commonwealth, the man entrusted with the common weal of the State, be Hartranft, who fought for his imperilled country, or Pershing, who voted against it? Hartranft, whose generous sword was drawn for freedom and the slave; or Pershing, whose cold, selfish vote was cast in the safety of the rear, consistently against both? Hartranft, the comrade of the workingman when they stood in long lines of blue, from the Potomac to the Mississippi, or Pershing, the paid attorney of the corporations? Hartranft, the patriot, or Pershing, the partisan?

We present to-day, brief but telling, "The Press Life and Record" of the candidates, and challenge for it the attention of every voter in the State:

| HARTRANFT. | PERSHING. |

—We suggested to the Democratic press to put up their roosters along with Pershing's name. He was the king of the Roosters when he was at Harrisburg, and he roosted exceeding high. It took a $500 fee to bring him down the first time.

OUR ASSOCIATED PRESS LETTER.

PHILADELPHIA, Oct. 6, 1875.

POLITICAL.

The skirmishers of both parties are now being well deployed by the Republican and Democratic State Committee Chairman, both of whom are now in this city, although the general engagement will not take place until after the Ohio battle is fought and its result recorded. There is no concealing the fact that Colonel Hoyt, the Republican chairman, and his adjutant, Col. Norris, of Governor Hartranft's staff, are not making anything like as vigorous a campaign as did Mr. Robert W. Mackey, when he ran for State Treasurer, two yeaas ago, while upon the other hand, Hendrick B. Wright, the Democratic chairman is the first to order an advance.

It may be wise in Messrs. Hoyt and Norris to "lay low," as the boys in hunt of deer are in the habit of doing, until they get a chance to get "home" without being caught out. I do not so regard it, but as I am not attending political funerals this year as a mourner, I have no right to direct how the show shall proceed.

Here, in this city, it is different; the Republicans are making a big fight, and it looks as though they would roll up a majority of 20,000 for Hartranft and Rawle. They have cast off all of McClure's Liberal Republican stables, except "Aleck" himself, and were it not that the Pilgrims are keenly sensible of the fatality that invaribly follows the fellow whom McClure advocates, Hill, Ash, and Rowen, the "highwaymen" of our city would long ago have had the great reformer scooped in.

It is believed here that the canvass now being made in Ohio, by Gov. Curtin, for Governer Allen, and who is to stump Pennsylvania for Pershing, during October, is part of the bargain made at Erie to make Curtin Secretary of the Interior, and McClure and Morrow B. Lowry his Indian Agents, in the event of a Democratic President being elected.

A TERRIBLE ACCIDENT.

As one of the dummy engines that carry passengers from this city to Frankford, one of the rural sections of Philadelphia, was on its way to that place on Sunday evening, it was run into by one of the New York Sunday Excursion trains; the passenger car attached to the dummy was cut in half and twenty-one persons killed and injured. Nobody is to blame for this horrible accident; the flagman says he signalled the approaching train; the engineer on the dummy says there was no flagman at the railroad crossing; the officers of the Pennsylvania railroad train assert that they slowed the train at the crossing, and the only wonder to me is that they do not all deny that any one was killed or that an accident occurred at all.

JAY COOKE.—OGONTZ.

The romantic grounds that surround Ogontz, the late residence of Jay Cooke, have been desecrated by the foot tread of the plebeians, who out of curiosity took advantage of the opportunity presented by a public sale of the furniture, wines, rare plants, imported cows, &c., purchased by Mr. Cooke out of the money stolen from widows and orphans.

As the vulgar people tramped up and down those grand staircases, finished in polished woods, or stood for the first time upon those costly carpets, and gazed at the carved woodwork and fresco ceilings, or looked admiringly at the white and black marble that adorned the grand hallway, with its revolving fountain in the centre, falling in jets over rare Chinese fish, they, the people, not the fish, could form some idea of the luxury in which this pious bankrupt spent his hours of leisure, after the arduous labors of the day, raking in the people's greenbacks, were over.

It was not very consoling to know that the ebony and buhl inlaid liquor case, with four decanters and twenty-four wines, brought but $27 50, although it cost $325, nor that the ebony and gilt centre table, Florentine Mosaic top, brought but $30 as against $275 paid for it; nor that the suit of carved rosewood and green plush velvet furniture, nine pieces, costing $1,350, brought only $328.

It was a sad sight to look upon the paintings, statuary and rare engravings, rich carpets, costly furniture, lace curtains of rare beauty and price, the tropical plants, and in fact everything that the inventions of the times can apply or the taste of a man with boundless wealth command, and know that every one of these costly articles was stained with the blood of victims who have gone broken-hearted to untimely graves.

Jay Cooke & Co. are not yet out of the toils of the bankrupt court, nor is he likely soon to be. I am of opinion that when a certificate of good character is given him, whereby he will be enabled to resume business and fleece other confiding fools, it will be after Judge Cadwallader is led to conscientiously believe that the owner of an ebony and buhl wine case was a Christian gentleman, and never intentionally wronged anybody out of $10,000,000. The case of Jay Cooke & Co., bankrupts, will be a legacy handed down by the Court to the Centennial exhibition of 1876 for the purpose of showing the "national blessings of a national debt," as understood by the prince of bankrupts.

MISCELLANEOUS.

Our eminent citizens who have been making the tour of Europe and the Holy Land, like the frosts of October, are again with us, and, strange to say, that such old stagers in ocean travel as A. J. Drexel, the banker, go and return by New York steamers. There is a cause for this, for no one would go from here to New York, and undergo all the inconvenience of a conveyance of baggage, etc., to that city unless the advantages presented by New York ocean steamship lines were superior to those of the American Steamship Company. It is rather a sad commentary upon the management of this line that it cannot induce Philadelphians, at least, to patronize it.

Man's inhumanity to man is being painfully illustrated by the examination now taking place here concerning the management at the House of Correction; the cruelties of superintendent Cattell, in confining men for thirty days in the dark cell, with nothing but bread and water to eat, and amidst the filth of their own excrement; with bucking and gagging unruly men; with introducing the Grecian bend, and other inventions of cruelty, equal in atrocity to those so glowingly depicted in Fox's "Book of Martyrs."

Mr. Bollean, a speculator in real estate, sold a lot in Mt. Moriah Cemetery, to a Mr. Jones, a colored man, who soon after buried his sister there, the superintendent of the cemetery, not knowing Mrs. Jones was a colored woman until the procession was about entering the grave-yard, when it was too late to stop the burial. A few days ago Mr. Jones "went to meet his sister," and an order was given to the superintendent to dig the grave in the Jones' lot; when the funeral procession got to the cemetery information was given that the interment could not take place; permission to place Jones in the receiving vault, until the matter could be settled satisfactorily, was asked and denied, and poor Jones had to be taken five miles away, to a colored burying ground, and laid in the vault. About four hundred white persons have protested against the burial of "bloody hathen nagars" with dacint white folks, and the widow of Mr. Jones, disregarding that protest, has appealed to the courts to solve this problem of distinction beneath the sod.

The women of the Centennial Commission are rejoicing over the sum of $38,000 cash now in their hands, $30,000 of which will be used to pay for the building designed to exhibit women's work.

The most thorough exhibition of American Industries will be the shoe trade. I was informed a few days ago that previous to the Vienna Exhibition, our exports of leather did not exceed $1,000,000 a year; that for 1875, the first year succeeding the Vienna Fair, it will exceed $6,000,000. It is believed by the shoe trade, that after next year, the exportation of American made shoes, will be very large.

One of the curiosities of the Exhibition will be a needle-making shop, in which the visitor can see a piece of steel wire started on its road to become a needle, and ending with its being put up in paper, ready for use.

About one thousand horses, (mostly those owned by the passenger car companies) are afflicted with pneumonia; in horse parlance it is called epizooty. As yet, the disease is not near so violent as it was last year, and but very few deaths have resulted from it.

PROHIBITION COMMITTEE MEETING—A TEMPERANCE TICKET TO BE PUT IN THE FIELD—A CONVENTION TO BE CALLED OCTOBER 14TH.—The Executive Committee of the Prohibition Party of Centre county, met at the Court House, in Bellefonte, on Tuesday, the 28th instant, at one o'clock p. m., pursuant to the call of the chairman. Present: Rev. J. Zeigler, chairman, F. M. Webb, secretary. David Weaver, Henry McEwen, Wm. P. Fisher, Elias Zimmerman, A. J. Shivery, John Divens, P. Reside, J. S. Sommerville, J. W. Stuart, C. Buck, Joseph Shirk, John Alexander, Wm. H. Blair, Prof. John Hamilton, J. C. Walker, Henry Heaton, Taylor Irwin, J. F. Williams, James G. Lucas, C. H. Else, D. P. Shope, Esq.

A number of letters were read from members of the committee regretting their inability to attend, but promising hearty co-operation by work and vote. The chairman stated that his object in calling the committee together, was to adopt measures for a more thorough organization, and also to take into consideration the propriety of nominating a County temperance ticket to be supported by the temperance men of Centre county, at the coming election. On this question he asked a full and candid expression of opinions so that the feelings, wishes and opinions of our friends might be represented.

Mr. J. S. Sommerville moved that this committee recommend the nomination of a temperance county ticket, stating that he made the motion in order to bring the question fairly before the committee for action. That so far as he was personally concerned, he had hitherto doubted the propriety, but was now ready for the movement. After some discussion the motion was agreed to by a decisive vote.

On motion, the chairman was directed to call a convention to meet in Bellefonte, October 14, at two o'clock, p. m., consisting of at least two delegates from each township or borough, to place in nomination a county ticket to be supported by the Prohibition Party of Centre county at the coming election. All in favor of the prohibition of the liquor traffic by Legislative enactment to be entitled to participate in the election of delegates.

On motion the committee adjourned to meet at the call of the chairman.

J. ZEIGLER, Chairman.
F. M. WEBB, Secretary.

—Governor Curtin has at last gone to Ohio to speak for Allen—but then, Allen needs a good deal if speaking for.

Poetry.

A House to Let.

[A volume of poems has come to our notice under circumstances of peculiar interest. The author, Caroline Underhill, some time ago was deemed insane by her friends, and was placed in an asylum whence she escaped, and to secure her freedom was obliged to institute a lawsuit, which resulted in establishing her sanity. During this suit, and in the midst of her troubles, she found time to prepare a little volume of verses, which exhibit a lively imagination and evidence sweet poetic fancy. We quote the following ingenious lines:]

To let, a poor old ricketty house;
Not a cricket or even a brown little mouse
E'er finds a crumb on the empty floor,
Or peeps asly at the cupboard door;
The landlord wanted an eagle more
Than the tenant could pay, so he moved away,
With his children and goods, on last quarter day.
The old rats burrowing out and in
Hold nightly revel with trooping din;
And loud through the crumbling rafters squeak;
The winds through the crannies and doorways creak,
Like stammering ghosts that are trying to speak,
With their pale cold lips, as they fain would tell,
Of the joys or woes that perchance befel
The many who came to the house to dwell;
Of the sad old man who last moved away,
For an eagle more that he could not pay,
As he reckoned, and reckoned it, o'er and o'er;
To pay for rent just an eagle more,
For a shelter o'er head, would be taking the bread
From the hungry ones that his wages fed.
Ah, what a pitiful place to live,
To cost him more than a man can give;
With its weary dearth, and its paltry worth,
When God hath given the whole wide earth.

An elegant house for sale or to let;
And furnished already, a beautiful set
Of rosewood and velvet, and plush with the two
Large Louis reception-chairs cushioned in blue;
A drawing-room carpet, medallion with green
And bouquets of roses besprinkled between;
Rich hangings of exquisite finish and grace,
The finest and clearest embroidery lace;
And fawn-colored silk, trimmed with orrange and blue,
Not faded a morsel, and equal to new;
The parlor more plainly, but equally well
Is furnished with golden and green brocatelle;
An aviary and conservatoire
Of rarest exotics upon the same floor;
A library with the best authors replete,
The standard editions, and classics complete;
The works of old masters adorning each niche
Of the elegant drawing-room fresco, and which
Were selected abroad with much leisure and care,
Originals mostly, with copies most rare;
Ah, pitiful 'tis, that a creditor's due
Should change such a home from old hands into new;
Ah, pitiful too, that a fortune once made
Should be scattered at once, by a crisis in trade.

For sale or to let, a neat little place,
Just twelve feet back, with a garden space,
Planted with roses and carefully kept,
With neat little gravel walks smoothly swept;
With sweet brier over the doorway swinging,
And over the wicket the clematis clinging;
With windows clear where the sunlight falls
Through snowy folds upon snowy walls;
Through boughs with many a fancy woof
O'er the low-pointed Gothic roof.

A widow sits in a mourning cap,
With a prattling infant upon her lap;
Two years ago she was a wife,
With gladdest hopes of her coming life;
Whilst he who then stood by her side,
In the firm strength of manly pride,
Ere one brief year was flown, had died.
And the little home that was more than gold
Dear to the heart's memories, must be sold.
For though she ply her needle night and day,
It will not suffice the cost to pay;
So the flag of the whiy auctioneer
Must float, on the morning, even here.

To be let at once, a house and lot,
Just out of the city, a quiet spot;
With many improvements far and near,
Where hills and fields were, streets appear;
But the rent is high, and 'tis out of the way
For a clerk or a merchant, who every day
Must slowly travel a mile or two,
And lose an hour to his business due;
So he just looks in, and passes it by,
As too far off, and the rent too high.

For sale, an elegant country-seat,
With its gardens and out-houses complete;
On the river bank, built in gothic style,
With beautiful views for many a mile;
And tastefully furnished in every part,
With many an exquisite work of art;
Its owner, possessor of fabulous wealth,
Would travel abroad for his failing health.
He has toiled and toiled for the prize of gold,
His ships are laden with wealth untold;
From the tropic isles, and the Indian seas,
His wealth is borne upon every breeze;
Alas! 'twere easier far to gain,
Than health renewed to his o'er-taxed brain;
He will go abroad but to find a tomb,
Or drag out years in a cloistered room;
Ah! pitiful too, that his countless wealth
Can't purchase back the free gift of health
He would give it all could it but restore
The cheerful flow to his heart once more.

To let, a desolate, cheerless room,
Less like a dwelling than a tomb—
Hidden in sub.erranean gloom;
A sick man on his straw is laid,
The last month's rent is still nopaid;
While the mother's wages scarcely buy
The bread for which the children cry,
As she sits by her half-extinguished lamp,
To stitch at night in the noisome damp.
She was not born to such weary lot,
A cheerful place was her father's cot;
She was not born to such bitter pain,
But the wine-cup maddened the husband's brain;
Ah! pitiful too, that a living tomb
Should hold a heart in its midnight gloom,
Ah! pitiful too, that the weary breath
Can blind the soul in a living death.

"There are many mansions prepared above
And the only rent is a heart of love;
And toiling on, none e'er may forget,
In Heaven is never a house to let."

Our Story Teller.

One of Them.

BY HARRIET PRESCOTT SPOFFORD.

When Mrs. March left this earthly scene she speedily underwent that canonization here which we trust she experienced above. Everybody remembered her loveliness and her martyrdom; nobody—but Mr. March—remembered an irritable, selfish body, little more than a baby when she married, and a baby ever since. Nobody, however, pretended to have met such a loss as Maria, a girl of fifteen, who, having been the slave of her mother's whims, was bewildered by her idle hours. The child had been fond of her pretty, helpless mother, and she sat crying in her room, or wandered about slipshoody and ordered away the children, who were in mischief from the time they were out of bed till they were in again.

Mr. March's home life had always been an outrage on decency. Now breakfast with three half-washed children, without Maria's society; dinner varied by ragged tires and bruised faces and Maria's appearance as an ornamental gravestone; lonesome evenings, with Maria at a neighbor's for a dish of flattery as the model daughter of a saintly mother—this was subject for thought. And Maria had no right to be surprised when Mr. March told her that he was about to bring into the house a second wife, who would be a kind mother to his children.

Miss Maria went out of the door with a bang, and was found in hysterics on the best bed. But Mr. March, giving the servants the same intelligence, kissed the children, and was off to the home of Miss Bell, which had made him tremble, remembering the domain where Maria was mistress.

Miss Melicent Bell was a sweet-faced woman, not yet forty, and so winsome as to attract those tired of beauty, her expression of good-will, patience, and purpose having grown with practice of her virtues. Mr. March thought if a limner would sketch an angel, there was the face for him to study. She was walking in the garden. It was hardly changed since he strode up it twenty years ago, snapping the poppies with his stick, and slamming the gate behind him. The box had grown some inches—it reached Miss Melicent's shoulder now—but it gave the same spiced odor as the wind stird it, as that robin rustled from point to point along it; and Miss Melicent had changed only as the box had—to sweeter growth. When she turned, with her gentle Sunday meditations—she was thinking of that verse, "Thou wilt show me the path of life: in Thy presence is fullness of joy: at Thy right hand there are pleasures for evermore;" and seeing Mr. March, she put out her hand with a start, as if to ward off a ghost. But her hands were taken with such a pressure as only flesh and blood gives, and it was Melicent who looked most like a ghost, as, with white lips whispering her name she would have fallen if he had not foreshortened matters by putting an arm about her. Poor Miss Millicent! Twenty years since that lovers' quarrel had left her alone in her garden—years in which hope had died, and love, if it had not withered, had been pressed away like a sacred flower that has lain in the hands of the beloved dead. Poor Mr. March! Twenty years, in which he had learned that "as a jewel of gold in a swine's snout, so a fair woman which is without discretion."

But Melicent was herself again directly. It was only the apparition of her youth, in Mr. March that had startled her. In that evening light he was young as ever. But Mr. March waited for no comparisons between now and then; he plunged into his errand; he said he had regretted to the core of his heart his head-strong temper, his subsequent infatuation. He did not utter another syllable about his wife; he only told the story of his home and neglected children. She was silent, and her tears fell. Then she replied that he must know any thing like that old girlish love was impossible to her now; but her interest had always lived, and her affection—her affection—And then Melicent's tears obscured her voice, and she murmured chokingly something about those motherless children; and the next thing was that Mr. March had her in his arms, and they had forgotten all about the lapse of twenty years.

Perhaps it had been wiser had they told Maria the story of their youth and their old love. But if they had done so, probably she would have regarded it as even greater indignity to her mother than the existence of a second wife; and it was judged best to say nothing, silence being the part both of native dignity and natural precaution.

But the new Mrs. March had not stepped inside her home and received the stiff touch of Miss Maria's hand before she saw the lion in her way. She did not blame the young girl; she rather liked her chivalrous constancy. She drew her to herself and kissed her; and Maria, resenting it as intrusive impertinence, ran down to Mrs. Lee's to complain of it.

"She's a designing hypocrite," said Mrs. Lee, "queening it there, and your mother, that sainted soul, not cold in her grave!"—As her mother had departed two years before, this ultimatum hardly sounded like a sainted soul. "Don't you," said Mrs. Lee, "let this woman get the upper hand of you with kissing and palavering." And there followed a conversation on the bride's toilette, from which one could gather no other conclusion than that the second Mrs. March's plain duty was to wear mourning for the first Mrs. March.

Maria meant to make it her own duty not only to wear mourning but to obtrude it. She had changed her linen tuckers for crape on the announcement of the marriage; she sat up by night to put a deeper crape fold upon her gown; and going about as solemn as though looking into the tomb, she lost no chance of airing her handkerchief, recently purchased, with a black border twice as deep as those she used when her mourning began. "I have lost my father, too," said Miss Maria, with sweet sensibility. But that was mere bagatelle beside her general conduct. She had led the younger children into full belief of the enormity of her father's act and the atrocious qualities of his wife, and there was little insolence of which she was not guilty. The morning after Mrs. March's entrance on her duties, descending to breakfast, she found Maria pouring tea. "Maria, that is your mother's place," said March.

"It used to be, Sir," she said, with indignant solemnity.

"No, indeed," chimed in Mrs. March, silverly. "I have poured the tea so many years that, if Maria is willing to relieve me, I shall be glad." And at that Maria flounced out of the seat.

Nor had Mrs. March been in the house a week before she found that tearful sympathy for the motherless children was an act of grace on her part, for they were enough to exasperate the recording angel. Abominable in behavior, insulting in language, they utterly perplexed the mother. But the verse in the thought on the evening her old lover came back to her, "Thou wilt show me the path of life," sounded like a promise still, and she trusted. One at a time she coaxed the children into her room, and talked to them so sweetly and seriously that, surprised and abashed, they were half converted, till Miss Maria undid the work. When, then, kindness had failed, Mrs. March felt that the welfare of these children depended on the integrity of her authority, yet felt unwilling to vex her husband in the matter, she was forced to resort to punishment—to oblige little Julia—who, at eleven, knew nothing better, and who, being frank and affectionate, would have done very well alone, but stimulated by Maria's influence, one day made a succession of mouths at her mother, and snapped her fingers in her face—to sit beside her all the afternoon, and to sew the seam of a sheet. She really tried to make it entertaining for the little thing, having no desire to grieve her, but merely make necessary authority felt; and the child, beginning in rebellion, found, before she was dismissed, that she had enjoyed herself vastly, and being ingenuous, came back pleasantly, and put her arm around Mrs. March's neck and said, "I'm real sorry I was so bad. I don't ever mean to believe a word Maria says again. I think you're very nice indeed, and I mean to love you—and I do?" But when Maria went down to Mrs. Lee's that night, she had a fine story of the step-mother's brutality in robbing little Julia of her holiday, and forcing her to do her sewing all the afternoon. And Mrs. Lee held up her hands and said if she were Maria she would resist the woman tooth and nail.

Maria had presently the chance to act upon Mrs. Lee's advice. For Tom March, having used the advantage of his eight tough summers to roll little Charlie on the floor, and after a thorough drubbing, having nearly bitten off a piece of his ear, Mrs. March—first trying to comfort Charley, who scorned her sympathy and styled her a blamed fool—proceeded to administer the same punishment to Tom that had succeeded with Julia, meaning, not to put needle and thread into his hand, but to show him some drawings of cruel people and tell him their hapless stories, and possibly to win some mutual interest. Of course Tom refused obedience when she directed him up stairs, and of course when she felt herself obliged to lay her hand on his shoulder and lead him along he stoutly resisted; and unfortunately Miss Maria was in the room to throw herself between the two with shrill voice and flashing eyes, calling out that Mrs. March was a worthless interloper. By the mercy of Providence there was a door open just beside them; Mrs. March was not a strong woman, but she was a quick one; before Miss Maria knew what had happened, she had been clapped into that closet and there she was ignominiously left, shrieking like a maniac, while Mrs. March led the astonished Thomas to her own retreat. She directed the release of Miss Maria at once, though, and then fastened herself in her room, with her rebel, but with no good result, as in her previous experience; for, unused to such scenes, and the rough horror of a hand-to hand broil wounding all her susceptibilities, she gave way to a hearty cry, which evidence of her weakness put Tom March on his pins again.

The servants, meanwhile, did not hasten to let Miss Maria out of durance; but when at last the door swung open, the wind could have given her no swifter wings to fly to Mrs. Lee's and burst in, red, weeping, disheveled, to make the awful revelation of the manner in which her step-mother had locked her, a grown woman, into a closet. And Mrs. Lee, responsive, told the child there was always room for her in her house—meaning all the same to ask Mr. March a round sum for her board.

But Mrs March had ample satisfaction in her husband's love and veneration, in his happiness, and the comparative order and comfort to which she had reduced his home. She had made the house beautiful. The table shone with her wedding silver; the dishes were faultlessly served; the children, bright and clean, received smiling encouragement to join the cheerful talk; and if, after they were in bed, Maria chose to sulk in her room, she lost a great deal of pleasure.

Still Mrs. March's gentle heart was sore over Maria. She would have been glad to win the girl, glad to provide pleasure for her. She understood her emotions, and seldom had any but tender feelings toward her. It hurt her as sorely to think of the noble traits of the boys she was unlikely to be able to train to noble ends.

Occasion, coming to every body, came at last to Mrs. March, when every child of the house was smitten with the dreadful epidemic at that time raging in the vicinity. Miss Maria, frightened out of her senses, betook herself to Mrs. Lee's. But Mrs. March, though miserable herself, dreamed of no fear. She had the children moved into connecting rooms, and although there was a professional nurse with them, vibrated between those rooms as we think only mothers can. Not a night did she sleep till the crisis was over; and in their convalescence it seemed to the children that it was only an angel moving about in her long white robe, bathing their foreheads, singing them to sleep, bringing them tempting messes, telling them entrancing stories, winning their hearts at last completely. On the whole though tired out in effort, Mrs. March did not know that in all her life she had had a happier time than during that month of convalescence. And then Maria came home.

"Mamma and I have a secret that she says I may tell you, Maria," cried Julia, after the greeting.

"An open secret," said Maria, insolently, "that all the world knows."

"Do all the world, mamma?" cried Julia.

"Mamma!" says Maria, with a sneer.

"Only a small fraction of it, dear," answered Mrs. March. I have told no one but you."

"Yes, Miss Maria March," cried Julia "mamma! and the dearest, sweetest, best mamma, who took care of me when she could hardly take care of herself, and when you ran away!"

"Oh, no, no, Julia," exclaims her mother.

"Don't say so. Think that if Maria had staid and taken the illness, it would have occasioned us so much trouble that it was a kindness in her to go."

"Oh my!" said little Julia, laughing. "Well, I don't care. Look here, Maria—whisper. Mamma says I may name it. She told me when I was getting better, so that I might have something pleasant to think about."

"Pleasant!"

"Oh yes, so very!" And we have had such beautiful talk about how it will look, and what we will do with it. And I am going to wheel it out in Charlie's old carriage—and—and—see here, Maria;" and she drew from under the sofa pillow an absurd little sock she was knitting, and contemplated it as if it were Penelope's web.

"You must have been mighty sick!" cried Maria. "And as for your mamma, as you call her, you wicked little girl, it is shameful in her to talk so to a child like you!"

Mrs. March took her work and left the room quietly; and then Miss Maria, feeling the welcome of this little new comer was the last outrage, broke into a flood of angry crying, and subbed herself into hysterics, with Julia exclaiming at intervals, "Oh, I'll tell my father of you! You see if I don't, Maria March!"

Miss Maria presently knew just how sick Julia had been. For it was not a week before the contagion, from which she had run when it was at home, assailed her in some of her out-door jaunts, and she went down as suddenly as the rest. Her first act was to send for Mrs. Lee, who sent regrets that duty to her own family made it impossible for her to come. Her next was to send for her father and demand a nurse. He assured her that the nurse still in the house should remain.

"A creature of Mrs. March's murmured the sick girl.

"The sickness is so general that there is nothing to be had. Your mother and I will be with you—"

"Don't let her! don't let her!" moaned Maria.

"I am glad to see such consideration on your part, my dear," said her father. "But I am afraid she will insist."

She did insist. When both the doctor and her husband urged Mrs. March to keep away from the sick-room, she replied that it was impossible. "It is the only chance I have to win her love," she exclaimed, with tears. "Heaven sends it—you must not prevent my using it." And the others, fearing too much opposition, let her have her way.

It was a hard way, with nothing but thorns for the treading. With all Maria's behavior, Mrs. March had never realized till the girl's delirium how violent had been her execration of herself. It was a sad strain upon the poor lady's nerves, to bear this torture of reviling, without the suffering that sympathy with sickness gives of itself, or the unconscious efforts made by her hourly acts of forgiveness. But, though fierce, the fever had a short run; the fatigue of unceasing attendance was great, but the delirium was soon over. Mrs. March trusted that the last act of that illness was delirium and not nature. Left alone with the patient, and obliged to do something that was resisted, she held the aching head on her shoulder, saying, though knowing that she said it, "Dear child, why won't you let me love you?" and the next moment received a slap in the face.

If it was a delirium, Maria had afterward an uncommonly clear recollection of her wanderings. It was not a strong blow, of course; but in the amazement and recoil, Mrs. March staggered back and fell against the corner of the table that held the lamp; and, table, lamp and bottles had gone over, and a tongue of fire was licking up the canopy.

Mrs. March never knew how she got the sick girl out of that bed or upon the lounge, or how she tore the burning hangings down and trampled out the fire on the empty hearth. She only remembered of having thought that even if Maria died of the exposure, she would rather be supposed guilty herself of carelessness than let the girl's father know of the vicious act. And Maria, whether stunned or overcome, sank into a long slumber, from which, when she awoke, she was out of danger.

"I owe you my life, doctor," said Maria, feebly, some days after.

"No, indeed, child," he replied. "You owe it to your mother. I should never have pulled you through but for her care. You owe it to her, too, that you were not burned in your bed."

"Oh, doctor! Did she tell you then—"

"Tell me what?"

"That I—I," whispered Maria, hoarsely—"I slapped her then?"

"You did?"

"It seems to me I did," said Maria, who knew perfectly well that she did.

"No," said the doctor. "She has kept that secret."

"Miss Maria," said the nurse, as the doctor left. "I saw it all. And it is a miracle that the shock did not kill Mrs. March. You should thank Heaven, not only that all is well with you, but with her!" The doctor came back and found the tears trickling through the girl's fingers.

"It was too harsh medicine, nurse," said he. "But we will do the best we may with it. I have known you too long, my dear, to disregard the happiness I see you throwing away."

"Oh, doctor," cried Maria, "I think the fever has burned all the venom out, of me!" And she burst into her old hysterical sobs. But the doctor soothed her, and did not leave till sure the nurse had not misjudged her strength, and that the truth would be a tonic.

As Maria lay there, thinking it all over, the enormity of her conduct and its possibilities made her blood run cold. If her step-mother had died in consequence of that shock, she did not see how she could live herself. She wondered if the doctor was right in thinking all danger of accident past. She was amazed to think she cared enough to fear it, and then she recalled days and nights of pity and sympathy, and felt all at once that her step-mother was superhuman in her goodness. What if trouble should come! what if this late happiness of her father's should be robbed from him, and by her! what if this gentle life, with the beauty of it that she now saw too late, should go out! She was fast working herself into another fever. She sent for Julia. "I want you to sit down," she said, "and tell me all mamma said to you about—about your secret, you know." And as Julia prattled on, the secret became of vital interest. "Oh, how blind and wicked I have been," she cried. "How happy the little thing will make us! how we will love it together!" And Maria felt as though her own life and death hung upon the fate of that little unborn child.

When Mrs. March came into the room, having been compelled to keep her own some days, Maria took the hand she laid on her forehead, and pulled her gently down. "How are you going to forgive me, mamma?" she murmured.

The tears burst out of Mrs. March's eyes. "Call me Melicent, dear," she cried. "Oh, I am so happy!" she said to her husband that night. "All the children love me—and it seems now as though I had more than my share!" And at her prayers there was a sort of ecstasy in the way she repeated the verse, "Thou wilt show me the path of life: in Thy presence is fullness of joy; at Thy hand there are pleasures for evermore."

It was some weeks after that Maria, having sent the children out to play, stood grave and solemn by the parlor window, feeling as though the universe itself must hold its breath, when she was summoned by the doctor. "She is sinking," he said, "very fast. No—no hope, no help. She was never strong. Be quiet, dear child; nobody is to blame." Maria did not hear him. She was flying up the staircase, and falling beside Mrs. March's bed, "Oh, it is my fault. I have done it!" she sobbed.

"Hush, darling," whispered Melicent. "I have been so happy that I am almost content. Dear," she breathed, "take my place. Make him"—and her eyes wandered to her husband, who sat utterly overwhelmed—"happy too. I have shown you how. You mustn't mind his grieving for me just at first; he—he was mine, Maria, more than twenty years ago. And, dear," she began again presently, "I am going to give you my little daughter for your own. You must be to her what she would have been so glad to be to you. Will you take her?" And she laid Maria's hand on the little velvet cheek. "Will you love her?"

"Oh," "whispered Maria, aching like a murderer," "if I have killed the mother I will die for her!" And she gathered the little creature in her arms, and hid her ashen face upon it. There was a long, long silence in the room. Then Mrs. March turned her sweet dim eyes once more upon her husband. And when at last he lifted his face from hers, the gentle soul of his step-mother had passed away.

Miscellaneous.

"Bloated Capitalists."

From the New York Times.

We shall principally confine ourselves to the mention of certain portions of the class of individuals whom, according to some inflation orators, it would be no injury, but rather a benefit, to the community to deprive of their means. And first, under this head, we will speak of poor seamstresses and working women who have laid up twenty, thirty, fifty, one hundred, or perhaps two or three hundred dollars, or more, from their meager earnings. These poor women are all capitalists. An inflation of the currency that would crush the "bloated capitalists" would most certainly crush them. The little that they possess is usually in savings banks, or invested in some other manner in which its value would depreciate in exactly the same proportion as that of the currency. There is many such a woman who for the last twenty years has, by depriving herself of greatly needed comforts, saved on an average ten or fifteen dollars a year, to whom any movement that would reduce the actual worth of the nominal dollar would be quite as disastrous as it would be to the millionaire, and in many respects incomparably more so. Another kind of capitalists which may be mentioned, consists of small farmers who, having become too old to bear the fatigue and exposure of agricultural labor, have sold their farms and are living in a small way on the interest of their money. These feeble and aged men are by no means, either in numbers or in the aggregate amount of property held by them, insignificant specimens of the "bloated capitalist," that canker-worm upon society which some of the political advocates of inflation seem to consider it so desirable to extirpate. To render it necessary for thousands of such men to betake themselves in their age and infirmity again to the fields, or to become dependent upon their hard-working relative, is one of the objects toward which the efforts of the inflationists are tending. And a glorious object it is! What right has a man who has in harvest-time every year worked fourteen or fifteen hours a day until he is sixty-five years old, to sit comfortably on the front porch of the house on a hot summer day while other men are getting in the crops? Suppose he has rheumatism badly. Is he not a "bloated capitalist!" To deprive such individuals of the leisure and comfort which they had, as they imagined, secured for themselves by half a century of toil, is an object which we can unaffectedly say is fully worthy of the great ends for which the inflationists are striving. We have mentioned two classes of persons. We might apply the same ideas and almost the very same words, not merely to these two, but to twenty. Most of our remarks about seamstresses and working woman would also be true of multitudes of working men. All, in substance, that we have said about farmers might be made to include aged mechanics, retired professional men, and many other classes of persons who, by faithful and long-continued attention to their business, have laid up a moderate competence for themselves and their families.

The Grangers on Piollett.

The Farmers' Friend, the leading journal of the Grangers, is our authority for saying that Victor E. Piollett's attempt to barter their votes away to the Democratic party for the sake of an office for himself, is not only a betrayal of his trust as a leading Granger, but a violation of the Constitution of the order he seeks to betray (by making it a political machine), but a positive and apparent injury to the cause of the "Patrons of Husbandry." For the paper, from the reading of which we reach these conclusions, announces itself as the "only organ of the Order in Pennsylvania, Delaware, Maryland and West Virginia." It says:

"That the nomination for State Treasurer was entirely unsought by brother Piollett, we know from a conversation had with him four days previous to the meeting of the convention; and whether he will accept the honor tendered him we have not yet learned. * * *

"Col. Piollett has been nominated by a Democratic convention as a Democrat. That he is a representative farmer and a leading man in order, may not assist him in the campaign, but it should not injure him. * * * * *

"Having said this much, we dismiss the matter from further consideration in our editorial columns. Our Order is not political, and i s organ will not advocate the claims of any party nominee for office."

And a correspondent, who signs himself "D," from Montoursville, Lycoming county, speaks very plainly of this proposed betrayal of the Order by its "worthy State Lecturer, brother Victor E. Piollett," as the following extracts from his letter show:

"Our Order in these parts has been nearly at a stand still for some time. * * * * * *

"There are several imputations our Order will have to free itself from before it will prosper as it has in the past, prominent among which is that of being a political machine. This argument has been used against us for some time; now, however, with better grounds for the supposition, as I am sorry to say, we find one of our leading State officers in the field, taking an active part in politics. Even this is not all; for hardly was his nomination known until we saw in several political papers that he was the 'Grangers' candidate,' and that he was nominated to catch the 'Grange element.' Now we do most earnestly protest against the use of these terms; because it is doing us an injury, and is damaging our Order to such an extent, from which I fear we shall not soon recover. Already we have heard it charged by prominent members, that our State lecturer, brother V. E. Piollett, has been using us to further his political interest. Knowing as we do that he has been in politics, makes it appears that such might be the case.

"Certainly, had he wished to do the fair thing with us, he would not hold the position of State lecturer, but would have resigned long ere this; thereby removing part of the political stain with which we are branded: though we say nothing against his workings as an officer of the State Grange (for he has done a great deal toward the success of our cause). Yet, even with all this in his favor, we fear this last move will injure us ten-fold more than all the good he may have accomplished.

"Therefore, we think it is more than just that he should resign the position he occupies, even at this late day; and by this act show us that he is not trying to drive us into politics, which is a violation of the principles of our Order, and our constitution. These are the sentiments of many 'Grangers.'" D.

—Which, as it strikes our view, is a trifle rough on brother Victor E. Piollett, as well as on the Democracy, to whom that worthy brother is endeavoring to trade off the whole Order of the Patrons of Husbandry.—Harrisburg Telegraph.

His Father's Occupation.

Preliminary to admission to the public schools of St. Louis, answers are required to a list of questions, some of which are at times too much for the intelligence of the unfledged citizens of the "future great city of the world," as witness the following:

A friend of mine, Miss J——, teacher of one of the primary classes, catechised a little ragamuffin a short time since with the following result:

"What is your father's name?"

"Don't know."

"Don't know your father's name?"

"No."

"Well, what do the neighbors call him?"

"Don't call him nothin'. They don't see him. He ain't never home 'cept nights."

"Then," as a bright idea occurred to her, "what does your mother call him?"

"Why, she calls him 'old fool!'"

At this point her researches into the secret history of that family ceased.

On another occasion a little candidate grappled successfully with every question on the list until the one, "What is your father's occupation?" was propounded, when he was forced to admit that he did not know what that word ment.

"I mean what does he do?" said Miss J——.

"Oh! he builds fires."

"Ah! he's a janitor, then?"

"I don't know what that means, neither."

"Why, a janitor is a man that builds fires, and sweeps out, and takes care of a building."

"I guess he ain't that kind, then, cos he don't sweep none."

"Doesn't he? well, where does he build fires?"

"I don't know," said the little fellow, very emphatically, and in a tone betraying considerable irritation; "he's dead."

IF Victor Emile Piollett, the French-American candidate for State Treasurer on the Democratic-Liberal-Corporation-Granger-Hard-Money-Greenbacks-Inflation-Contraction-Anything-to-beat-Hartranft ticket is elected, there will be no "unexpended balance" in the State Treasury or anywhere else when he can get a grab. The tax-payers may be certain of that. A legislator who "set up" a job to take a bribe and only refused to take it because the $400 offered was not par funds, is not the kind of a man to entrust with the money of the State of Pennsylvania.

GREATNESS.—"Father," asked a Vicksburg boy at the dinner table the other day, "are you a big man?"

"Well, I dunno," musingly answered the parent. "Why?"

"'Cause I heard some men talking over at the hotel, and they said you were one of the biggest men in town."

"Well, I suppose I do stand pretty high," replied the parent, looking pleased and consequential.

There was half a minute of silence, and then the boy added:

"They said it was a wonder how you carried your feet around!"

The boy can't understand yet why he should have received a box on the ear which made his head roar for two long hours.

HOW SHE SENT HIM BACK.—It takes a woman to repulse a traveling agent sometimes. In a neighboring village the other day a man called on Mr. C. at his place of business, and wanted to sell him an organ. Mr. C., not wishing to buy, to get rid of him referred him to his wife. On the man's making his business known to the lady, she asked him if Mr. C. sent him to her.

"Yes, ma'am," he replied.

"Well, sir," said Mrs. C., "you just go back and tell him that until he can furnish me with something beside mackeral to eat, I can make all the music that is necessary 'round this house."

The agent concluded he couldn't sell an organ there.

A Frenchman learning the English language complained of the irregularity of the verb 'to go,' the present tense of which some wag had written out for him as follows: "I go; thou startest; he departs; we make tracks; you cut sticks; they absquatulate or skedadle."

The Republican States and Territories already carried this year are New Hampshire, Maine, Rhode Island, Michigan, North Carolina, Colorado, and New Mexico, and this is a much better record than we were able to present at this time last year.

OF THE PERIOD.—Eugene, a poet, to Amelia:

"Come, sit down on the shelly shore,
And hear the mighty ocean roar."

Amelia, a fashionable young lady to Eugene:

"I can't sit down, you silly goose,
Because I'd bust my pull-back loose."

LETTERS FROM THE PEOPLE.

HOUSERVILLE Pa., Sept. 25, 1875.

MR. EDITOR.—Your paper reports a speech, by deputy Rhone, to the Hublersburg pic-nic party. We have just read it, and think that it contains some grave reflections. He tells them that the Grangers are ordering their supplies through an agency from the far-away places of the land; and to exterminate the middle-man is one of their great objects; and to educate their people is another, so that when they go to market, that they go not in a bent form, but that they stand straight and demand a fair price for their farm products, and from their minutes, as given in the Deputy's figures, it seems that they are driving with a slack rein, and we think it would be well enough for some thoughtful one amongst them to cry whoa before they have scattered the population of their own towns, and killed the middle-man. When this has been consummated, through their buying from wholesale dealers at retail prices in distant cities, who will they sell to, even if they do stand straight and demand a high price. Does any sensable person not know that it has been the merchant, the mechanic, the artisan, the professional man, together with all traficers and middle-men, and men of leisure and wealth, that has built up and peopled our towns which have created a market for all perishable products of the farm even beyond the supply, at prices double that they were twenty years ago, and yet the farming community are urged by the grain leaders to kill the goose that lays the golden egg, destroy their home market, to not patronize their own towns, but buy their supplies abroad, and when they sell at home to demand a high price. Every one ought to know that benefits must be mutual, or trafic must cease. Can you refuse a man matches and ask for a light. The Deputy says that they number 2,000,000. Well, membership costs five dollars each, to say nothing about lost time, which is said to be money also. From the statistics they give, it is fair to presume that the farmers of the United States have been bled already to the time, of about $20,000,000 in money and tume, by following this ignus-fatus the Grange.

FARMER.

MESSRS. EDITORS.—W. W. Brown is going over the county making speeches for Pershing and Piollett. He made one at Eagleville on Saturday evening, and another at Snow Shoe, on Monday evening. He claims to be the champion of the workingmen. He invites "old party hacks," "thieving politicians," and "salary grabbers" to come and listen to him, and be annihilated. Brown gets his hand-bills printed at the Watchman office; he borrows money from Democratic candidates to pay his expenses to and from these meetings. He wants to be the workingmen's champion, and while he is traveling around in the above manner, his family is actually suffering for the necessaries of life. He never did an honest day's work in his life; he is in debt to nine-tenths of our merchants, and can't get credit for a plug of tobacco in this town. Yet he pitches into "salary grabbers." How was it about his salary grabbing when Treasurer of Centre county. He excoriates "party hacks," when five dollars and a bottle of whiskey will buy him any day for either party. Is he the workingmen's champion? Once more, he has betrayed the Republican party; and he will betray that party, or any other party, just as often as anybody offers to buy him. Workingmen, if he could, he would sell you out at a sixpence a head. He and W. H. Blair are trying to get up a temperance party. Blair is using him in the interest of the Democracy. They are both so-called reformed men, and now they are pretending to fight there worst enemy, whiskey, in the interest of the worst enemy temperance ever had—the Democratic party. Workingmen, don't be lead astray by Brown and Blair.

A WORKINGMAN.

Judge Pershing's Letter.

In his letter accepting the nomination of the Erie Convention, Judge Pershing sets out with an attempt to ignore the issues of the past as unworthy of consideration. He declares that they have been "permanently settled by Constitutional amendments." He is evidently anxious to have the people to forget that, when in the Legislature, he voted against the Thirteenth Amendment, that he voted to censure President Lincold for his emancipation proclamation, and that he also voted for the bill to prohibit negroes from entering Pennsylvania. Oblivion of these and other facts of his record as a member of the Legislature would doubtless be very agreeable to him. But the people are not going to forget or forgive them.

On the financial question, Judge Pershing shows himself a thorough trimmer. He is opposed to inflation of the currency in one sentence, and in another avows doctrine the adoption of which must inevitably lead to inflation. He is in favor of the "doctrine always held by the Democratic party, that gold and silver constitute the true basis for a bank-note circulation;" but is opposed to the only measure that has been adopted looking to a return to such a basis. He says we must cease exporting specie to pay interest on our indebtedness abroad before specie payment can safely be resumed; but as he hints at no time for resumption, he would have us pay our bonds, principal and interest, with paper, thus requiring indefinite inflation, continued depreciation of the currency and ultimate repudiation of the national debt. It is quite plain that Judge Pershing has had his ideas very seriously muddled, in endeavoring to give an expression conforming to the financial planks of the Erie platform.

In referring to State affairs, he promises, if elected, to meet the demand for reform in the government. Inasmuch as a succession of Republican administrations have conducted affairs so well that a load of debt piled up by previous Democratic administrations, and increased by the necessities of war which he and his friends brought on, has been reduced by many millions, and as, at the same time, the people have been almost wholly relieved of taxation for State purposes, it is difficult to imagine what kind of reform Judge Pershing favors. There can be no change in the present system except a reversal of it, and a return to the vicious and corrupt extravagance of the old Democratic politicians, by which the debt of the State was made to exceed forty-one millions. The Republicans have brought it down to twenty-five millions, with securities in the Sinking Fund worth about ten millions, and the people want no reform which will make a change in the policy that has produced such noble results.

About the most significant thing in Judge Pershing's letter is his announcement that he will not resign his judgeship and will not take the stump during the campaign. This shows a want of confidence in his party as well as in himself which must be discouraging to the political managers. He is afraid to hold himself responsible for the possible results of the contest, but will throw all the responsibility on those who made the nominations and the platform. He will be neither leader nor standard-bearer, but will wrap himself in his judicial robes and keep away from the battle-field.—[Blair Co. Radical.]

—Of the eighteen Democratic State conventions which have been held this year, all have demanded hard money but Ohio and Pennsylvania. That party is for gold, and the platforms in those two States were made purposely to gull the workingmen. But they are not so easily gulled, and will say so at the polls.

SUICIDE—SINGULAR DELIBERATION.—On Wednesday evening of last week, Robert Hewitt, a batchelor, aged 48 years, living about seven miles from Altoona, committed deliberate suicide. The Mirror gives the following particulars: Being possesed of sufficient income to enable him to take life easy, he has had a man named Joseph Seguin living on his farm and doing work for him. Hewitt made his home with Seguin's family. He was a quiet, sensible, temperate man, and although a member of no religious denomination, he led a respectable and moral life, so far as any of his friends or acquaintances are aware. On Wednesday morning last, about 9 o'clock, he took a double-barreled shot-gun and all the paraphernalia for a hunting expedition, remarking to the folks at the house that he would take a day's hunt in his woods. This attracted no particular attention, and he took his departure. Going about a mile into the woods, it seems that he deliberately commenced his preliminaries for his departure hence. Removing his hat, shot-pouch, powder horn, game pouch, coat, vest and shirt, he hung each article to a seperate bush. Then, taking the gun, he placed the muzzle directly over his heart, having previously raised the hammer and removed the ramrod, and, leaning heavily against the gun, he touched the trigger with the ramrod. The discharge was effected, the body swayed from its position, the instrument of death failed in its support, and the lifeless body of Robert Hewitt fell heavily to the ground, his hands still grasping the rod in the grip of death.

The continued absence throughout the day of Mr. Hewitt alarmed the family, and they started in search of him, finding his body about five o'clock on Wednesday evening. On the game-pouch, which hung just above his head, he had pinned a piece of paper bearing the words, "Look within." On complying with this injunction a letter was found, signed Robert Hewitt, and stating that, being weary of life, and feeling that he had lived long enough and done enough "for good and for evil," he has deliberately taken his own life. He directed them to look in his red trunk, where they would find his will and other papers explanatory thereof. The body was removed to the place of his late residence, and Coroner Humes was notified. Taking with him Dr. J. T. Christy, the coroner repaired to the house and held an inquest. The will was produced and read, the letter was given in evidence, and such other testimony obtained as was possible, and the jury rendered a verdict of death by suicide. The will, which is in the custody of Coroner Humes, decrees that all property, both real and personal, shall hereafter belong to Joseph Seguin, his farmer, and that Seguin is to pay all his debts, which only amount, the will states, to about fifteen dollars. The instrument is said to be well written, but bears the name of no witnesses. His effects consist of about five hundred acres of improved and timbered land on the mountain, a house and lot in Tyrone, and considerable personal property. On examining the wound in his side, the Dr. found that even the wadding had penetrated to the heart, and he considerer it doubtful whether the man heard the report, so fearfully certain and sudden was the discharge.

SUNDAY SCHOOL INSTITUTE AT GATESBURG.—On Saturday, October 9, there will be a Sunday school institute at Gatesburg, commencing at two o'clock. A children's meeting will be held the same afternoon at three, and the usual evening meeting. The meetings will be addressed by the members of the County Association, and other friends of the Sabbath school cause. We hope there will be a general turn-out of the citizens and Christian workers of that neighborhood.

PERSONAL.—Rev. E. H. Yocum, of Newberry, one of the ablest ministers of the Gospel in the Central Penna. M. E. Conference, and a brother of Major S. H. Yocum, of this place, paid us a visit last week

EDITOR'S TABLE.

Harper's Magazine For Oct., 1875.

HARPER'S MAGAZINE for October is an unusually attractive Number. It opens with a beautiful idyl of country life, contributed by Jean Ingelow, and gracefully illustrated with six pictures by Sol. Eyting, Jun.

A richly illustrated article, entitled "The Land of Lakes," describes Minnesota—its resources, natural scenery, and its principal cities, St. Paul and Minneapolis.

Junius Henri Browne gives some graphic pictures of prominent Parisian journalists—including De Girardin, De Cassegnac, About, and Veuillot, whose portraits illustrate the article.

Mr. Conway contributes a second paper on the art treasures of the South Kensington Museum, profusely illustrated, and giving especial attention to the influence of the Museum in the progress of Art Education.

The most important paper in the Number is President Woolsey's contribution to the "First Century" series, entitled "The Experiment of the Union with its Preparations." Besides its value as a historical review of our political growth as a nation, it is also timely through its suggestions as to our immediate situation.

Of a lighter character, though by no means trivial, is the Hon. S. S. Cox's paper on "Legislative Rumors," full of racy sketches and anecdotes.

A Letter of Castelar's philosophic papers is given in this Number.

The field is already ripe in this country for the suggestions and eloquent appeal of Elias Gray's paper on "The Mission of Music." It is an intensely practical discussion of the prospects of popular musical education in America.

Julian Hawthorne's thoroughly healthful and yet almost ideally romantic novel, "Garth," is continued, its hero being now ready to be launched into the wonderful experiences of college life.

Of short stories this Number has an unusual variety. Charles D. Deshler recounts a characteristic story of Southern life, for which Mr. Eytinge has made two excellent illustrations. William Mackay, of the most brilliant contributors to Punch, in "The Popular Idol," tells a downright humorous story of his romantic adventures in Ireland. Mrs. Frank M'Carthy contributes "A Pair of Scales;" and Louise Chandler Moulton, "Bertha's Experiment."

Besides Jean Ingelow's poem, there are also poetical contributors, by J. W. De Forest, A. H. Louis, F. W. Bourdillon, Nelly M. Hutchinson, L. W. Backus, and A. F.

The Editorial Departments admirably cover their respective fields.

THE RETAILS MAGAZINE, for October, is full of valuable political material. The article by Judge Lawrence, of Ohio, "The People a Nation: the Union Perpetual," will demand attention. It places the States Rights heresy in a strong light, and advances proof to show that it had no respectable following in our early history. "A Manufacturing South;" and "The Free South—Ordeal of Emancipation," are thoughtful articles, containing a great amount of rich material for others to build upon. "Democratic Rule in Georgia;" "Finance and Politics;" "Carpet-Baggers, North and South;" "High and Low Tariffs;" "What Democracy has cost the South;" are among the many able articles which make the October number one of the best yet issued. The Republic is published at Washington, D. C. Send $5.00 to Republic Publishing Company, and obtain the Magazine for one year.

LOCKE'S NATIONAL MAGAZINE for October concludes the "Tragedy of the West Wing," by Mrs Shepard, and prints, as a relief to its tragic recital, a bright and breezy art-story by Maurice Thompson, the poet, entitled "The Daphne." W. H. Maher contributes a pleasing but pathetic story, which is called "Arthur Mallow, Widower." "The man who was like Shakespeare" is finished in this number. Articles on "Tricks of Speech," "The Courage of Women," and "Flower Traps," and unusually good poems by Eben E. Rexford and Helen A. Manville, fill the pages to the "Editorial Notes," and make a more than ordinary interesting magazine. Subscription one dollar a year; J. P. Jones, Toledo O., publisher.

We have on our table the October number of "Wide Awake," a new monthly magazine for young people of all ages. It is beautifully and profusely illustrated, and is in all respects one of the best magazines for young people published on the planet. It is published by D. Lothrop & Co., Boston, Mass. Ella Farman is the editress. Terms, $2 00 a year; or it can be obtained of any news dealer at 20 cents a number.

The Medicine That Cures
—IS—
VEGETINE.

Taking into consideration the character of its vouchers, the history of its cures, and the immense increasing demand, Vegetine may be fairly entitled the leading medicine of the age.

For scrofula in the blood, Vegetine is an infallible remedy, and no person need suffer from tumors, ulcers, and all diseases arising from impure blood, if Vegetine is used according to directions. There is not a case of scrofula in existence that Vegetine will not cure, provided, however, the vital functions have not lost their power of action, all that may be said to the contrary notwithstanding.

Vegetine is pleasant to the taste, mild in its influence, and absolute in its action on disease, as the following unquestionable evidence will show.

H. R. STEVENS, Esq:

Dear Sir: When about 6 months old I was vaccinated. The parties who were vaccinated from the same virus died from the humor. The humor spread over me to such an extent that I was rolled in bran to prevent me from scratching my person. The disease finally settled in my head. I remained in this condition about twenty years, troubled all the time with sores breaking in my head and discharging corruption from my ear. At this time a small kernel appeared on my neck, gradually increasing in size until a tumor formed of such immense size I could see it by turning my eyes downward. All this time I was taking various remedies for my blood without any substantial benefit. I then went to a prominent physician in Boston who, during his treatment of six months, lanced the tumor eight times, which cost me nearly $400. This left me with a rough, aggravated sore, without at all diminishing the size of the tumor, and in a sickly, feeble condition. I consulted another physician in Natick, who, after considerable time, succeeded in healing the sore without reducing the size. At this point I commenced to use Vegetine, through the earnest persuasion of a friend. After I had taken this medicine about one week I experienced wonderful sensations. My whole body seemed to be undergoing a radical change, until, finally, the tumor broke and discharged frightful quantities. From this time it decreased in size until the bunch disappeared, but my neck still bears the ugly scars of the sore and lance. I am now healthy and strong and able to work every day.

I will also mention that I have been an acute sufferer from inflammatory rheumatism ever since I can remember, until commencing the use of Vegetine, when almost immediately all rheumatic pains ceased. This statement I volunteer for the purpose of benefiting other suffering humanity, and you will confer a favor by giving it as much publicity as thought proper.

Very gratefully,
O. M. SAVELS, Ashland, Mass.

What is Vegetine?

It is a compound extracted from barks, roots, and herbs; it is nature's remedy; it is perfectly harmless from any bad effect upon the system; it is nourishing and strengthening; it acts directly upon the blood; it quiets the nervous system; it gives you a good, sweet sleep at night; it is a great panacea for our aged fathers and mothers, for it gives them strength, quiets their nerves, and gives them nature's sweet restorer—as has been proved by many an aged person; it is the great blood purifier; it is a soothing remedy for our children; it has relieved and cured thousands; it is very pleasant to take—every child likes it; it relieves and cures all diseases originating from impure blood. Try the Vegetine. Give it a fair trial for your complaints; then you will say to your friend neighbor and acquaintance, "Try it; it has cured me."

Report from a Practical Chemist and Apothecary.

BOSTON, January 1, 1874.

DEAR SIR: This is to certify that I have sold at retail 1843 dozen (1832 bottles) of your Vegetine since April 12, 1870, and can truly say that it has given the best satisfaction of any remedy for the complaints for which it is recommended that I ever sold. Scarcely a day passes without some of my customers testifying to its merits on themselves or their friends. I am perfectly cognizant of several cases of scrofulous tumors being cured by Vegetine alone in this vicinity.

Very respectfully yours,
A. J. GILMAN, 328 Broadway.

Bellefonte Markets.

BELLEFONTE, Oct. 6, 1875.

The store-box nuisance on the side-walks is in full blast, in some localities, set up as a sign of new goods, just arrived. The ladies who attend the Fair will have a fair opportunity to tear their dresses as they pass along our thoroughfares.

WHEAT—The demand for wheat has improved within the last week, and the market is firm at our quotations; but the mills are buying at a shade below our figures, notwithstanding buyers from abroad are paying our quotations and a shade higher. Farmers will be highly benefitted if they will subscribe for the REPUBLICAN and read our reports, which will enable them to look after their own interests.

RYE, CORN AND OATS—No change.

POTATOES—There is a large crop of potatoes, which are being offered in wagon lots at 40 cts.

v7-39-3t

PUBLIC SALE OF VALUABLE REAL Estate.—Pursuant to an order of the Orphan's Court of Centre county, will be sold at public sale on the premises, in Ferguson township, in said county, on the following described real estate, formerly owned by James Ross, deceased, to-wit: A valuable farm, situated in Ferguson township, on the road leading from Brick Mills to Pennsylvania Furnace, about two miles from the Brick Mill and two miles from the village of Loveville, bounded by lands of Samuel Rider, John Ellenberger, Sr., Samuel Musser, and William M. Lyon & Co., containing about 294 acres. The improvements are: A frame dwelling house, containing seven rooms, two stories in height, with all the conveniences; a large bank barn, a smoke-house, wood-house, corn-crib, and wagon-shed, with a well of never-failing water near the dwelling. Also a log dwelling house, weather boarded, with a frame kitchen, and containing seven rooms, together with a barn and other necessary out-buildings. The Half Moon creek runs due north and south through the tract. There are upon the premises two orchards of fine fruit, in bearing. About seventy-five acres of the tract is woodland, finely timbered with oak, white pine, and chestnut. The whole farm contains about 295 acres, and may be conveniently divided into farms, the buildings being so situated as to permit it. Persons desiring to view the premises will call upon John W. Ellenberger, residing thereon.

WEDNESDAY, NOVEMBER 10, 1875,

Sale to commence at one o'clock p. m.

TERMS.—One-third of purchase money upon confirmation of sale; one-third in one year thereafter, and one-third in two years thereafter, with interest; to be secured by bond and mortgage upon the premises.

39-3t SUSAN ELLENBERGER.

MANHOOD: HOW LOST, HOW RESTORED!

Just published, a new edition of DR. CULVERWELL'S CELEBRATED ESSAY on the radical cure (without medicine) of Spermatorrhœa or Seminal Weakness, Involuntary Seminal Losses, Impotency, Mental and Physical Incapacity, Impediments to Marriage, etc.; also, Consumption, Epilepsy and Fits, induced by self-indulgence or sexual extravagance, etc.

☞ Price, in a sealed envelope, only six cents.

The celebrated author, in the admirable Essay, clearly demonstrates from a forty years' successful practice that the alarming consequence of self-abuse may be radically cured without the dangerous use of internal medicine or the application of the knife; pointing out a mode of cure at once simple, certain and effectual, by means of which every sufferer, no matter what his condition may be, can be effectually cured, cheaply, privately, and radically.

☞ This book should be in the hands of every youth and every man in the land.

Sent under seal, in a plain envelope, to any address, post-paid, on receipt of 6 cents or two postage stamps. Address the publishers,

QUINTUPLE PICTURE of the CENTENNIAL GROUNDS.

BIRD'S-EYE VIEW OF THE CENTENNIAL GROUNDS.

Mr. Thomas Hunter, of Philadelphia, whose admirable series of Lithographs has done so much towards awakening interest in our National Celebration, has published a picture containing the five principal buildings on one sheet, also a Bird's-eye View of Fairmount Park with the buildings in the foreground. Nothing could more fully supply the information sought by those interested. The Quintuple represents all the buildings on a large scale, with sufficient detail to convey to the mind some of their magnificent proportions. The BIRD'S-EYE VIEW is by far the most faithful representations of the Park yet printed. Every building whose plan and position have been determined, every ravine, fountain, and tree, is correctly drawn.

These pictures are indorsed by the Centennial Board of Finance, who afforded the publisher every facility to make them accurate, and who have distributed them largely in every civilized country on the globe. Aside from their merit as works of art, their interest now in prospects of the Celebration, and as mementos when that event is over, entitles them to a place in every household.

Mr. Hunter's list now comprises the following: 1, Art Gallery; 2, Main Building; 3, Horticultural Hall; 4, Machinery Hall; 5, Agricultural Hall; 6, Bird's-Eye View; 7, double (Nos. 1 and 2 on a sheet); 8, triple (Nos. 1, 2, and 3 on a sheet); 9, Quintuple (Nos. 1, 2, 3, 4, and 5 on a sheet). All uniform price, 50 cents each. Sent free by mail, securely packed. Prices in quantities, $4 00 per dozen, and 40 cents for postage; $30 00 per hundred; $200 00 per thousand; and less in larger quantities. Sent C. O. D. by express or on money order.

Good agents wanted everywhere, to whom liberal terms will be given.

The Old Sweet Song.

I remember a song whose numbers throng
As sweetly in memory's twilight hour
As the voice of the blessed in the Realm of Rest,
Or the sparkle of dew on a dreaming flower.
'Tis a simple air, but when others depart,
Like an angel whisper it clings to my heart.

I have wandered far under sun and star,
Heard the rippling music in every clime,
From the carol clear of the gondolier,
To the wondrous peal of a sacred chime;
I have drunk in the tones which bright lips let fall
To the thirsty spirits in bower and dell.

The anthems bland of the masters grand
Have borne me aloft on their sweeping wings;
And the thunder-roll of the organ's soul
Drowns down the murmur of fairy strings,
Or the shepherd's pipe, whose music thrills
With the breath of morn o'er the sleeping hills.

But none remain like the simple strain
Which my mother sang to my childish ears,
As nightly and oft o'er my pillow soft
She gently hovered to soothe my fears.
I can see her now, with her bright head bent
In the light which the taper so feebly lent.

I can see her now, with her fair, pure brow,
And the dark locks pushed from her temples clear
And the liquid rays of her tender gaze
Made eloquent by a trembling tear,
As she watched the sleep that is sweet for all
Like rose leaves over my spirit fall.

And the notes still throng of that old swee song,
Though silent the lips that breathed them to me,
Like the chimes so clear which mariners hear
From the sunken cities beneath the sea;
And never, ah! never can they depart
While shines my being and beats my heart.

That song, that song, that old sweet song!
I gather it up like a golden chain,
Link by link, when to slumber I sink,
And link by link when I awake again,
I shall hear it, I know, when the last deep rest
Shall fold me close to the earth's dark breast.

Agricultural.

Turning Under Weeds.

A little time in fitting the plow for it will enable the plowman to turn entirely out of sight rag weed and other green crops which have made headway in neglected land. A field when the crop is designed to be turned under, presents a very unsightly appearance when the ends protrude at every furrow as we too often see.

Where neat plowing is attempted, a common and entirely satisfactory method is to attach a small chain to the whiffletree of the horse walking in the furrow and the other end to the plow beam, so near the standard of the mold-board that the bend of the chain will fall in line with the centre of the turned furrow. If properly fastened to the plow beam the chain, though quite small, will haul down all weeds, corn, clover, &c., even six or seven feet high, just in time to be covered by the plow as the furrow slice falls over. When the plowman has had no experience in turning under green crops with the aid of a chain, he will find it necessary to adjust the arrangement until it works to entire satisfaction. For he can have the assurance that it has been done, and can be done so as to turn every kind of green crop entirely out of sight without mowing and hauling them off for compost.

It requires a great amount of labor and time to mow as thick a crop of colt's tail or rag weed as covers many fields intended for wheat, and then to rake up the garbage, haul dirt and compost it, and get it ready by turning for manure. The plow and chain will do this whole thing in a neat and workmanlike manner for the entire garbage of green crop with but very little extra labor.

The garbage once covered by the plow is evenly distributed, and with its rapid decay in the moist soil sufficient ammonia is generated to give the young plants of wheat a good start.

When this green crop is turned under, a dressing of lime is of peculiar value, and will aid in the decomposition of the green crop turned under, but will, with escaping elements of vegetation, enter into valuable fertilizing compounds in the precise state of affinity to make them most available to the growth of plants.

There are tens of thousands of dollars worth of fertilizing substances covering the fields in August that might be turned to valuable account by the judicious use of the plow chain and a little lime, and which, without they are turned to account in a very short time, will be lost in the air, and the worthless hulks remain an eye-sore on the fields. When the fields are to be plowed the weeds should be turned down, and when they are not to be plowed they should be mowed before the seeds fall, hauled together and mixed with dirt in compost heaps, and thus converted into manure.

The waste of garbage that might be converted into valuable manure is simply enormous, and would go far towards enriching many a cultivated field now almost unproductive.

What an Old Farmer Says.

This is the advice of an old man who tilled the soil for forty years:

I am an old man, upwards of three score years, during two scores of which I have been a tiller of the soil. I cannot say that I am now, but I have been, rich, and have all I need, do not owe a dollar, have given my children a good education, and when I am called away I will leave them enough to keep the wolf from the door. My experience has taught me that:

One acre of land, well prepared and manured, and well cultivated, produced more than two acres which receive only the same amount of manure and labor used on one.

One cow, horse, mule, sheep, or hog well fed, is more profitable than two kept on the amount of food necessary to keep one well.

One acre of clover or grass is worth more than two acres of cotton where no grass or clover is raised.

No farmer who buys oats, wheat, corn, fodder and hay, as a rule for ten years, can keep the sheriff from the door in the end.

The farmer who never reads the papers and sneers at a book of farming and improvements, always has a leaky roof, poor stock, broken down fences, and complains of 'bad seasons.'

The farmer who is above his business, and entrusts it to another to manage, soon has no business to attend to.

The farmer whose habitual beverage is cold water, is healthier, wealthier and wiser than he who does not refuse a drink.

Capabilities of an Acre.

J. M. Smith, a market gardener of Green Bay, furnishes some interesting statements of experiments in high culture. He has found the rule invariable, not a single exception to it, that the more he has spent in cultivating and manuring, the greater have been the net profits per acre. Last season he cultivated fourteen acres, and began with a more thorough and expensive cultivation than ever before. The result was, that, although a 'terrific drought,' one of the dryest seasons ever known in that region prevailed, after speding $3,986, or $384 per acre, he had a better balance than any previous year.

He appears to regard constant cultivation, especially through drought, in connection with copious manuring, as all important. Stable manure is the standard, with such use of superphosphates, plaster, lime, ashes and other manures as experience and good sense points out. 'After you have learned to spend money to the best advantage,' he remarks 'a larger profit may be made by laying out $300 per acre than less. After the second year, if your land does not pay all its expenses, taxes, and ten per cent. on $1,000 per acre, there is something wrong somewhere. I have some acres of land that for the last two years did not pay expenses, but for a number of years past have not failed to pay ten per cent. on at least $2,000 per acre. I expect my whole garden to do more than that in a short time."

He adds that he is aiming at 1,000 bushels of onions per acre, then a crop of carrots or turnips, or 500 bushels of early potatoes; or, if strawberries, 12,800 quarts, or 400 bushels per acre. This amount of strawberries is not wholly impossible, as we have known, under our own observation, this rate on two-thirds of an acre.

'What are you doing there; why don't you go to work?' asked a father of his son. 'I'm like Micawber,' replied the youth, 'waiting for something to turn up.' The boy was turned over the paternal knee, and received the usual mild admonition. He believes now that something has turned up in a double sense, entirely different from what he expected.

A returned Enoch Arden was tearing around and railing at a Christian community that would allow a woman to starve nearly to death in the absence of her husband. The truth is, he left her in the days of hoop skirts looking like this O, and on his return found her pinned back and looking like this I. The impression that she had starved was natural

An exchange says "the Sandwich Islanders believe that Beelzebub walks the earth in the form of a woman."—And now and then you will find a man in this country who believes so, too, and that he has married the woman.

REV. ROBT. A. BROWN, the Prohibition candidate for Governor of this State, will speak in Danville, in front of the Court House, on to-morrow (Saturday) evening at 7½ o'clock. As he has always been a staunch Republican, friends of that faith should make it a point to hear this eloquent orator.—Danville Intelligencer.

We copy the above merely to show how transparent is the whole Prohibition movement. It is a Democratic dodge to gull temperance Republicans into the support of a third party; and we have not the least doubt in the world that all the expenses of the Prohibition speakers are paid by the Democratic Executive Committee. It will be noticed that the Intelligencer wants none but Republicans to attend the prohibition meeting! It is not intended for Democrats. The temperance Republican who is fooled into a support of the rum loving Democracy in this way, deserves to see his cherished cruse go down in infamy and his children come up in full affiliation with the alcoholic curse. And he probably will, if there are enough fools like himself in the State to aid in stealing the Republican majority; for the cause will thereafter be shunned by all decent men as being nothing more nor less than a league with Democracy and a covenant with rum to throw the State into the hands of a corrupt and dangerous class of demagogues. Any Republican who votes the prohibition ticket this fall is either a fool or a knave. If he votes it through a desire to advance the temperance cause, he is a fool; for if he has any sense, he cannot fail to see that a vote for prohibition is a vote for Democracy, and a vote for Democracy is a vote for anything but temperance; and if he alienates the Republican party from all support of the temperance movement, the cause is lost. If he votes prohibition from any other motive he is a hypocrite and a knave.

The Body of Hon. Alfred W. Markley Rescued From the Water.

The mystery in regard to the disappearance of Hon. Alfred W. Markley, of Camden, was solved by the discovery of the body of a drowned man on Saturday morning, in the Delaware river, at Allegheny avenue wharf. A description of the body having been telegraphed to the Central Station, General Sewell, Dr. Markley, a brother of the missing man, and Captain Heins proceeded to the locality, where the body had been found and at once recognized the remains as those of Hon. Alfred W. Markley. The body had evidently been in the water about 48 hours. It was placed in the custody of Coroner Goddard and afterwards removed to his late home, No. 420 Cooper street, Camden. Mr. Markley had been suffering for sometime past from a fistula in ano, and had been informed by his physician that he must submit to a painful surgical operation. Since then he has seemed somewhat depressed in mind. On Wednesday, having collected about $10,000, he deposited $8,000 in bank, leaving the balance at home. On Tuesday evening he took tea with John C. Bullitt, Esq., but exhibited no signs of any mental derangement. On Thursday morning he left his house and visited Esterbrook's pen factory; later he was seen on a Shackamaxon ferry boat proceeding to Philadelphia, and about 10 o'clock he was seen in a Union car. This was the last seen of him until the discovery of his body on Saturday morning. Mr. Markley was 50 years of age, and a native of Columbia, Pennsylvania. When quite a young man he became clerk of the State Bank, Camden. He was afterwards assignee of the great Richard estate in West Jersey, and then cashier or president of the Farmers' and Mechanics' Bank, Camden. The Camden and Amboy Railroad Company made him one of its directors, and at the time of his death he was political manager for its executive officers. He was a stockholder of the Port Norris railroad, and was some time ago appointed receiver for it, the judge refusing all security. He was also vice president of the Camden and Philadelphia Ferry Company. The remains have been turned over to the family, and Coroner Goddard held an inquest in the case yesterday and found "suicide by drowning while temporarily insane." The funeral will be held on Wednesday at noon.

THE hard-money platforms of the New York and Nebraska Democratic State conventions are a bone in the throats of the greenback inflation press of that party, in this State and Ohio, which has almost choked them to silence. The Pittsburgh Post, the only daily organ of our Western Democrats, disposes of it in six lines. The situation is awkward, as it exposes so glaringly the insincerity of their professions, the utter lack of unanimity on the absorbing question of the currency.

MEDICAL.

Wright's Rejuvenating Elixer.

For the restoration of Nature's forces. It gives new life and vigor to the aged, and causes the blood of youth to course through the veins. It effectually cures Impotency, Palpitation of the Heart, Loss of Muscular Power, Low Spirits, Disorganization of the Generative Organs, and all the train of ills that follow in the path of the transgressor of Nature's laws. Price $2 per bottle.

It will be readily understood that in the brief space afforded by the advertising columns of a public print, it is impossible to give all particulars of the diseases that may be cured by the CHEROKEE MEDICINES. That they are destined to become immensely popular is plainly obvious in consequence of their

GREAT INTRINSIC MERIT.

The pamphlet and circulars that accompany the medicines give all the information which cannot be given here, and the remedies may be had of any respectable druggist.

"Unquestionably the Best and Cheapest Fashion Journal ever published in America."

THE

"DOMESTIC" MONTHLY

A JOURNAL OF

Fashion, Literature, and Art.

OPINIONS OF THE PRESS.

"How a Journal of Fashion can combine fashion and literature at very low terms is well shown by this periodical. The May number, besides a colored Fashion Plate, has thirty-six pages, profusely illustrated, on the fashions of costumes for ladies and children, seasonable fabrics, trimmings, millinery, lingerie, coiffures, and domestic art, and yet with all this there is room for poems and tales, by popular authors, notices of new books, etc., and the price of all this matter is only $1.50 per annum. Take it all in all, we know of no periodical of which readers get so much for their money as those of the 'DOMESTIC' MONTHLY."—N. Y. Evening Mail.

"If one wishes the latest information concerning the latest fashions, the 'DOMESTIC' MONTHLY is ready with the intelligence, aided by abundant illustrations. It does not, however, neglect current literature, as it contains poems, a serial story, some interesting miscellany, and art notes."—N. Y. World.

"It combines literary merit with a great deal of information in regard to ladies' costumes, fabrics, toilettes, etc. It is plentifully illustrated in its fashion articles, and its list of contributions is deserving of much praise."—N. Y. Commercial Advertiser.

"A far better periodical than many of the so-called weekly papers."—Terrebonne Republican, Houma, La.

"One of the best Fashion Magazines that comes to our office."—Clarendon Press, Manning, S. C.

"The most delightful of the Fashion Magazines."—American Standard, Jersey City, N. J.

Ayer's Hair Vigor

For restoring to Gray Hair its natural Vitality and Color.

A dressing which is at once agreeable, healthy, and effectual for preserving the hair. It soon restores faded or gray hair to its original color, with the gloss and freshness of youth. Thin hair is thickened, falling hair checked, and baldness often, though not always, cured by its use. Nothing can restore the hair where the follicles are destroyed, or the glands atrophied and decayed; but such as remain can be saved by this application, and stimulated into activity, so that a new growth of hair is produced. Instead of fouling the hair with a pasty sediment, it will keep it clean and vigorous. Its occasional use will present the hair from turning gray or falling off, and consequently prevent baldness. The restoration of vitality it gives to the scalp arrests and prevents the formation of dandruff, which is often so uncleanly and offensive. Free from those deleterious substances which make some preparations dangerous, and injurious to the hair, the Vigor can only benefit, but not harm it. If wanted merely for a HAIR DRESSING, nothing else can be found so desirable. Containing neither oil nor dye, it does not soil white cambric, and yet lasts long on the hair, giving it a rich, glossy lustre, and a grateful perfume.

Miscellaneous.

TASTELESS MEDICINES.

A prominent New York physician lately complained to DUNDAS DICK & CO. about their Sandalwood Oil Capsules, stating that sometimes they cured miraculously, but that a patient of his had taken them without effect. On being informed that several imitations were sold, he inquired and found his patient had not been taking DUNDAS DICK & CO'S.

What happened to this physician may have happened to others, and DUNDAS DICK & CO. take this method of protecting physicians, druggists and themselves, and preventing Oil of Sandalwood from coming into disrepute.

PHYSICIANS who once prescribe the Capsules will continue to do so, for they contain the Pure Oil in the best and cheapest form.

DUNDAS DICK & CO. use more Oil of Sandalwood than all the Wholesale and Retail Druggists and Perfumers in the United States combined, and this is the sole reason why the pure oil is sold Cheaper in their Capsules than in any other form.

OIL OF SANDALWOOD is fast superseding every other remedy, sixty Capsules only being required to insure a safe and certain cure in six or eight days. From no other medicine can this result be had.

DUNDAS DICK & CO.'S SOFT CAPSULES solve the problem, long considered by eminent physicians, of how to avoid the nausea and disgust experienced in swallowing, which are well known to detract from, if not destroy, the good effects of many valuable remedies.

Soft Capsules are put up in tin-foil and neat boxes, thirty in each, and are the only Capsules prescribed by physicians.

Tasteless Medicines.—Caster Oil and many other nauseous medicines can be taken easily and safely in Dundas Dick & Co's Soft Capsules. No taste. No smell.

Bellefonte and County.

Money! Money!!

We are in need of money, and we hope every friend of the REPUBLICAN will remember when they come to the fair next week, to call in and pay their subscriptions. It is a small matter to each one of our patrons, but it will relieve us, and, believe us friends, we are actually in need of funds. Call and see us, and help us if you can ever so little.

——Choice Canaries in song, at Green's drug store. Every bird guaranteed to sing.

——The 2½-inch water pipes on Linn street have been dug out and a four-inch pipe laid full length of the street. A model improvement.

——For pocket-books, perfumery brushes, combs and fancy goods, call at Green's drug store, Bush House Block.

——Teachers of music who have given Clarke's new method for the Piano Forte an examination, unhesitatingly pronounce it the best. The work is meeting with a deservedly large sale. Sent by mail for $3.75. Published by Lee & Walker, Philadelphia.

——W. K. Alexander, representative of a small portion of the Democracy of this county, is continually rushing into print, in search of notoriety. His last is an inquiry to the Patriot asking the politics of the Schuylkill county commissioners who were sent to the penitentiary by Judge Pershing. Next, he'll be inquiring about the sex of Susan B. Anthony.

——The Wykoff pavement in front of our office was repaired last week by Col. George A. Bayard, our hard-working candidate for County Treasurer. You could see him any day, coat off and sleeves rolled up, working like every poor man. And the Colonel is just the man that will be made responsible for the treasury keys for the next two years.

——The celebrated Berger Family, with Sol. Smith Russell, furnished a rich treat in Reynolds' Hall on Monday evening—such a treat as the lovers of musical art in Bellefonte rarely enjoy. An entertainment so varied, so pleasant, so continuously exciting, and so artistic in all its details, and withal so instructive and elevating has seldom been seen in this place. In his line Russel stands unparalleled. He is a humorist of the most refined and effective description.

——An excellent new board walk has been laid along the stone wall which bounds the handsome grounds of Mr. Daniel Rhoads. We also notice that Mr. Rhoads and A. O. Furst, Esq., have made handsome fence enclosing the commons in front of their residences, which is being graded and beautified into a handsome park. It is their intention to ornament it with shrubbery, shade trees, and the like. It will be a very pleasant and attractive acquisition to Linn street.

——The Harper Bro.'s are one of the soundest and most reliable business houses in Centre county, the leading member of the firm has just returned from Philadelphia, with a large and well selected stock of new goods. People visiting the fair, would do well to call at their store on Spring St., and examine their goods. It is always a satisfaction to visit a place where a good variety can be seen. They have bought their goods at panic prices, and for cash. They have therefore made excellent bargains, and can sell so low as to defy competition. Call and see them.

——Doctor S. P. Lytle, of Harris township, has located in Philipsburg, for the purpose af practicing his professio . Doctor L. lately graduated with credit at the celebrated Bellevue Medical College, New York. He is a young young man of ability and integrity, and a great lover of his profession. We commend him to the good people of Philipsburg and extend our best wishes to him for a prosperous future. We take this method of introducing him to brother Ellsworth, of the Journal, who, we are sure, will find the Doctor to be a true gentleman, as he is himself.

TWO DIFFERENT GATHERINGS.—In another column will be found two reports of two different temperance meetings. The one is a report of the formation and subsequent proceedings of the "Christian Temperance Alliance;" the other is called a "prohibition committee meeting." The former is a body intended to be composed of Christian ministers of the gospel and members of the Christian churches. Their object, as we understand it, both in their county and State organizations, is to promote the cause of temperance through the agency of the church. The scheme is a most worthy one. We are in full sympathy with all movements of the kind. If the worthy object of making a strong temperance sentiment in the community cannot be promoted by Christian men and women, through the avenues of the Christian churches, then God help all out side movements. There were two elements, or two characters, or rather two persons, in attendance at the organization of the Alliance, who did more injury to the cause of temperance than can be repaired for some time. They were a Rev. Babcock and a Mrs. Deitrich. The former claims to be the corresponding secretary of the State Temperance Union. We are not prepared to say that he does not hold such a position. If he is, the State Temperance Union, if it is not a Democratic political organization, will recall him immediately. His efforts here were not favorable to the promotion of temperance reform, not in the least. The efforts he put forward while here last week were wholly and solely in the interest of the Democratic party. The rumor is abroad over the State, and we see it stated frequently in our exchanges, that this Rev. Babcock is employed by the Democratic State Committee to canvas the State during the present campaign in the interest of the Democratic party. We have his conduct here in Bellefonte as a living, bold, and undeniable proof of the fact. On the surface, he presents that calm, heavenly, serene, green-eyed piety which marked the countenance of Judas when he came to meet the Savior in Gethsemane; but his cloak does not hide the cloven foot. He has not deluded the intelligent Christian men and women who assembled at that convention from the purest of motives. He has given a slap in the face of these good people, that should cause their blood to boil with righteous indignation. If this Babcock wants to assist in securing the triumph of the Democratic party, there is nothing extremely unusual, indeed, in his stealing the livery of Heaven to serve the devil in, but those whom he attempts to delude should know it. We have the word af a gentleman in this town, whose name we can furnish if necessary, that this same Babcock, a few years since, attempted to organize a prohibition ticket in Cambria county, at the time when the late Hon. Sam Henry was a candidate for the State Legislature. Babcock had succeeded in awakening considerable interest among the temperance people of that community. Mr. Henry found that he could not afford to loose the temperance vote, and he sent for Babcock and bought him off for one hundred dollars.

Now, temperance people of Centre county, what do you think of this man? Are you willing to follow the leadership of Babcock and a few designing men? Look at his henchmen! The one a lawyer and a Democratic politician, who is always at war with the existing state of things, and the other a man who has publicly offered to "throw the Junior Sons" to whichever party will pay him the most money.

As to Mrs. Andrew Jackson Deitrich, of Williamsport, the other speaker before the Alliance, we do not desire to say much. It is unmanly to censure a person of the opposite sex, however much of a fool she makes of herself. This lady is a strong temperance woman, and was one of the original crusaders in the above city. She appeared last winter, before a joint meeting of the State Legislature, and made a speech to the members, urging them not to repeal the local option law. This she had a perfect right to do, and we commend her for her bravery and pluck. We have not, however, arrived at that point where we can commend political speeches by females. They have a right to do so, we admit; but we dont believe they have a right to intrude themselves upon religious gatherings, and introduce their hysterical notions on politics, without an invitation to do so. Mrs. Deitrich made an attempt at a political speech, in which she attempted to berate both political parties She did not say anything of any account, and she really did nobody any harm but herself. Her own sex were ashamed of her, and if her husband and children had been present, we are sure they would have hung their heads. If somebody that has influence with her, would insist on her staying at home, they would be doing temperance reform a favor.

The other temperance meeting was called at the same time. The prohibition committee meeting was called by some men in this place, who thought that, by calling it for the same time and place, they could delude the country people into the idea that they were one and the same affair. They found that the "Christian Alliance" would not permit anything of the kind, and the two leaders accordingly fixed up their little side-show performance. By refering to their report, it will be found that they assembled an hour earlier than the Allance on Tuesday afternoon. When the two leaders found that they could not count their side-show in along with the main performance, then they fixed with the delegates who were present a time for holding a convention to nominate a county ticket.

Who instigated this county convention and county ticket? Gen. Wm. H. Blair, and W. W. Brown. Why those two men should travel arm in arm in a political enterprise of this kind, is a mystery to everybody who does not know the disposition and affinities of them both. Why General Blair, an accomplished man and able lawyer, whose record for bravery and gallantry as a soldier is as good as any man's who took the field for the Union cause in the war of the rebellion, should associate with a man like W. W. Brown, in a moral reform movement, is one of the local questions that searches in vain for an answer. Why he should neglect his practice, and spend his time and talents with Brown, to organize a temperance party in this county this fall, can only be answered with the undeniable charge that he is attempting to throw the temperance vote in this county to the use of the Democratic party. It is not surprising that Brown does this; it is his trade. His influence, which the best calculators have figured up to be simply nothing, is always for sale. He is too lazy to work, but he must live; and blackmailing is his profession. His offer to "throw" the Junior Sons to either the Democratic or Republican party is a blackmailing scheme, and an insult which the honest, hard-working Juniors will resent with an independence worthy of their name, when election day comes around.

We cannot close this article without thanking Rev. G. W. Miller for the manly way in which, as chairman of the Alliance, he discountenanced all efforts to divert the meeting into a political channel. He deserves the thanks of all honest temperance people. At the close of the last session, he stated in plain terms that the Christian Temperance Alliance had nothing whatever to do with any other temperance organization which had met in Bellefonte on that day, referring to the Blair meeting at one o'clock that same afternoon.

BOLD ROBBERY.—On Wednesday last, on a passenger train, between Altoona and Tyrone, two unknown men robbed a gentleman and threw him off the cars. In his fall his foot caught some obstruction and the cars passed over the unfortunate man's leg, crushing it terribly. The villains came on to Tyrone and there boarded Conductor Waddle's freight train on the B. E. V. road, which is due here at 3:30 P. M. A telegram was sent to Chief Walker, of this place, to arrest them when they arrived. At Julian, the scoundrels were observed occupying a box car. The brakemen locked both doors, intending to bring them safely to town. As the train was slacking at Unionville, they jumped off and fled to the mountain. About twenty firemen from Unionville started in pursuit of them, but were unable to find them. Up to this time we have not heard of their arrest, but hope that justice will overtake them and that the law will be vindicated.

——The following preamble and resolutions were passed at the late exercises of the Centre County Normal School:

Whereas, Believing that the cause of popular education should be more widely extended, so as to bring within its scope all classes and conditions of society, therefore, be it

Resolved, That the Centre County Normal Institute be and hereby is reorganized as an Institution that has for its aim a broad and liberal dissemination of learning, extending its benefits to all who may desire to accept of its offerings.

Resolved, That the session just closed, of the Centre County Normal Institute, has been a most propitious one, and through its influence the cause of education has received a new impetus in Centre county.

Resolved, That the students of the Normal Institute hereby pledge themselves to lend their aid in maintaining the Institute, deeming it an invaluable auxiliary to the public school interest.

Resolved, That the students of the Normal Institute hereby tender their warmest thanks to their tutors, Professors Meyer and Gramley, for the kindness and impartiality shown towards them while under their instructions, and that they will always be held in greatful remembrance.

Resolved, That the students of the Centre County Institute hereby pledge themselves to reader to each other such aid in the performance of their respective duties as may be required of them, not forgetting that they are laboring in a common cause, the advancement of which should be the highest aim of every true teacher.

Resolved, That we render our thanks to the citizens of Milesburg for their hospitality.

——The firm of S. & A. Loeb, successors to Loeb, May & Loeb, merchants, have received their fall and winter stock of goods, and have been busy for a week in placing them upon their shelves and in their storehouse. Their stock is simply magnificent, both as to bulk and quality. In this connection we would remark that their establishment will close next Friday evening at six o'clock, and will stand closed till Saturday evening at the same hour. The period included constitutes the Israelitish day of atonement. See their advertisement in another column.

——If you want a new suit of clothes go to Montgomery's, and you will get a nice fit, a close fit, and a fit all over.

——Have you tried Green's Peruvian beer and mead? They are the best drinks out, and only five cents a glass.

——Prof. Phillippi, æronaut and acrobat, will make a balloon ascension to day at or shortly after noon.

——Persons attending the Fair should call at Sechler's and get one of their excellent five-cents cigars.

SUNDAY SCHOOL INSTITUTE.—The Half Moon township S. S. Association, will hold an Institute in Centre Line Lutheran Church, on Wednesday, Oct. the 13th.

——His Excellency, Gov. Hartranft, Hon. W. W. Ketchum, of Luzerne, and John G. Love, Esq., of this place, addressed an immense mass meeting at Hollidaysburg, on Thursday evening last.

——Every man, woman and child, should prepare for the winter campaign by procuring a bottle of the "compound syrup of tar, honey and bloodroot." It cures coughs and colds like magic. Price fifty cents. Sold at Green's drug store

——By request, a sermon on the death of James Alexander, Esq., delivered some weeks since, by the Rev. Mr. Wright, at Milesburg, will be repeated on Sunday morning next in the Presbyterian church of this place. Services commencing at 10½ o'clock.

——Mr. Wilbur L. Malin, our talanted and scientific lightning manipulator, thought he'd try how it went to live and run a telegraph office in Towanda. He tried it for two weeks, and, concluding (very properly) that there is no place like Bellefonte, returned home, much to the satisfaction of his many friends.

——W. W. Brown, and B. L. Batchelor are at present stumping the county for the Democratic ticket. Brown makes the speeches, and Batchelor takes up a collection. Since General Blair has joined the Junior Sons, he acts in the capacity of silent partner and manipulator of the temperance people. Lovely trio.

BASE BALL.—The series of base ball contests for the championship of Centre county, under the auspices of the Agricultural Society, will commence this morning. The first game will be between the "Keystone's," of Bellefonte, and the "Centre County Nine." To-morrow morning the victors in to-day's contest will play "Semper Paratus" club, of Pennsylvania State College; and the victors in this last contest will play the "Centennials," of Philipsburg. These clubs are all made up of good material, and the contest promises to be most interesting.

——It is important in times like these to know where we can buy good goods cheap. Such a place is Montgomery's, No. 6 Brockerhoff Row. Mr. Montgomery has just returned from Philadelphia, with a full line of gentlemen's furnishing goods. Call and examine their stock; it won't cost you anything to look at their goods. If you have not the money, call and see them, and when you are prepared to buy you will know where you can find what will please you, and where you will be sure to get the worth of your money. Persons visiting the Fair, will find it to their advantage to call at Montgomery's before leaving town.

——The Democratic Senatorial Conferees met at Clearfield on Thursday last, to nominate a candidate. They balloted for three days, and then the conferees quit in disgust. They will meet again to-morrow in Tyrone to try the thing over again. It is a bitter fight. Peale, of Clinton, Meek, of Centre, and Boyer, of Clearfield, are each bound to make the riffle. Neither one will give an inch. There is no telling what the thing will result in, but if Wallace gets through with his lawsuit with John Siney, the chances are that he will take hold of the trouble and shake it up by the four corners and make the nomination to suit himself.

——Centre County S. S. Association will hold an Institute, commencing at half past one o'clock, in the Mount Pleasant N. B. Church, two miles west of Hannah Furnace, on Thursday Oct. 14. "Bible Work in Winter" will be the general topic for discussion. One hour in the afternoon will be given to the young people and children. Under the same auspices, it is expected that an institute will be held at the Fairview school house, two miles west from Curtin Station, on Friday afternoon and evening, Oct. 15.

THE FAIR.—The fair this week is the attraction in Bellefonte. The attendance is excellent thus far, but to-day, tomorrow, and Friday, will constitute the three grand carnivals. The entries in the departments are fully equal to previous years, and in some cases far exceed any previous exhibition of the Society. President Woodward and Secretary Keller, assisted by the Executive Committee, with General Beaver at its head, have been indefatigable, and their efforts are making a splendid showing. Should the weather be favorable, nothing can prevent the society from having the satisfaction of leading all our sister counties in the matter of a complete and successful fair. The departments of amusements alone will attract large crowds daily.

——Best violin strings at Green's.

PROCEEDINGS OF THE LUTHERAN SYNOD.—The Synod of Central Pennsylvania assembled in the Lutheran church, in Bellefonte, on Wednesday evening, Sept. 29, 1875. In the absence of the President and Secretary, the Treasurer preached the opening sermon from Matt. 9:12.

On Thursday morning, at 8½ o'clock, the Synod met and spent one-half hour in prayer. At nine o'clock the Synod convened for business, President Copinhaver in the chair. The roll was called and new members were received. The retiring President read his report. Officers were elected for the ensuing year. The result was: President, Rev. John Tomlinson, of Aaronsburg, Centre Co.; Secretary, Rev. J. M. Rice, of Newport, Perry Co.; and Treasurer, Rev. W. H. Divine, of Salona, Clinton Co.

The subject of missions, home and foreign, beneficiary education, the Sabbath question in connection with the International Exposition to be held in Philadelphia in 1876, and the momentous temperance question and Sunday-school connections, were discussed and acted upon.

The sermon on Missions was preached on Friday evening, by Rev. W. L. Heisler, of Mifflinsburg, Union county. On Friday evening a sermon was delivered by Rev. H. Zeigler, D. D., of Selinsgrove. On Saturday evening a sermon preparatory to the Synodical and congregational communion was preached by Rev. A. H. Anghe.

On Sunday morning a communion sermon was preached by Rev. J. Frazier, and the sacrament of the Lord's Supper administered. In the afternoon an interesting Sunday-school meeting was held. Other schools were invited and a large number of visitors were present. Short addresses were made by Rev. W. E. Fischer and Rev. M. J. Firey. In the evening the church was crowded to hear the ordination sermon preached by Rev. S. G. Shannon, and to witness the imposing ceremony of ordination. The sermon was a good one and was delivered with much earnestness. Rev. W. E. Fischer, of Centre Hall, and Rev. J. A. Bright, were ordained.

All day Monday was devoted to business. An evening session was held from 7½ to 9½ o'clock, when Synod adjourned to meet at Liverpool, Perry Co., Pa., on the last Wednesday of September, 1876.

A resolution passed unanimously by the members of Synod visiting Bellefonte, we will append.

[redacted]

HEAT AND SICKNESS.—During the hot and sultry weather, an unusually amount of sickness prevails in every community, especially among females and children, caused by the fermenting miasma, gas, or nitrogenous matter floating in the air, arising from decaying vegetation. This bad air effects everything we eat, and engenders in it a semi-fermentation which, when taken in the system, is like leaven, and operates on the whole, starting in the bowels and soon producing a violent fermentation, causing diarrhœa and disentery. It has been found that the use of Speer's old Port Grape Wine, of New Jersey, has an extraordinary effect in checking this fermentation and restoring the system to its original strength and vigor, and when used in time it prevents these complaints altogether. Invalids and debilitated persons have found it the most nutritious and strengthening tonic in the market, and the greatest help in resisting the poisonous effects of the vitiated atmosphere. This wine, so long established, has become the standard wine upon which physicians rely as the most rich in body and genuine in character, containing the greatest amount of medicinal properties with the least intoxicating qualities. Speer's vineyards promise a larger yield this year than usual, and he has reduced the price of his wine, that any one can now purchase it of druggists for $1 per bottle. None of this wine is bottled until it is four years old.—Gazette.

J. Zeller & Son, agents, Bellefonte.

ATTENTION, VETERANS!—The following account of a speech made by Brick Pomeroy, the great Democratic leader in New York, will be read with interest by all honorbly discharged soldiers.

BRICK POMEROY'S EAST SPEECH.

To the Editor of the Press.

SIR: This has been our fair week. The Eastern Ohio Fair is being held here. Brick Pomeroy was the orator of the occasion, and was paid to come by the Fair Association. In the evening he was used for an exciting Democratic rally. When will the gods mete out justice to such traitors both to purse and principle? His speech was an outrage upon the people—an insult to principle—a libel on patriotism. He said "The soldiers who fought in the rebellion were all thieves, and the bigger the shoulder-straps the bigger the thief." He justified the assassination of Lincoln, and said it was no part of the Democratic party to go South, armed, in that lying hour to desolate homes, isolate women, steal cotton and spoons, &c. He hurled the deepest, vilest insult at the head of a patriotic Republican people. Our only hope is that reaction will come and justice follow.

L.

Alliance, Stark county, Ohio, Sept. 19, 1875.

——On Saturday, October 16, his Excellency, Governor Hartranft, and a portion of his staff, will visit and inspect the cadets at the Pennsylvania State College in this county. It is probable he will remain over Sunday in Bellefonte, the guest of General James A. Beaver.

——Our mountains look beautiful in their sere and yellow leaf condition.

——Don't you know where Sechler's is? Why, in the Bush House block, opposite the REPUBLICAN office.

CHURCH ROBBED.—The old Union Church, of Philipsburg, was broken into week before last and robbed of all valuables.

——Judge Walls, of Lewisburg, accompanied by a cloud of witnesses, was in town on Thursday and Friday, attending a lot of arbitrations.

——At the election of Co. B., 5th Regt. N. G., held at the company's armery on Saturday evening last, to fill the vacancy occasioned by the promotion of Captain P. B. Wilson to Lieutenant-Colonelcy of the regt., 1st Lieutenant, O. W. Vanvalin, was elected Captain, and R. A. Williams, 1st Lieut.

——Mrs. Dare, whose store is on Allegheny St., keeps the best assortment of millinery and fancy goods to be found in Centre county. She also keeps Butterick's celebrated patterns in the catalogue. Fall hats, slipper patterns, zephers, yarns, and Germantown wools, a full assortment. Ladies, if you want to see the fashions, go to Mrs. Dare.

——Sechler & Co., in the Bush House block, opposite our office, have just received from New York and Philadelphia a large stock of crockery and glass ware, also a full line of groceries. This firm are well-known, and for selling first-class goods they take the lead of any other house in this town. They confine themselves almost exclusively to groceries, crockery and glass ware, and as a consequence, have a finer selection of this class of goods than can be found at any other place outside of the large cities. Sechler's is one of the best places in Bellefonte to buy goods. Do not take our word for it, but call and see them.

——Brown and Batchelor are not having much success with their Pershing and Piollett meetings. At Eagleville they had difficulty to get a place to hold their meeting; the authorities were unwilling to give them the school house, and, when they did get it, Brown could find nobody to act as president. Finally he persuaded Arthur Foresman to take the chair, Brown himself making the motion. Arthur could not stand it; he slipped out and left Brown blowing away at two or three persons. At Howard, they would not let them speak at all; and at Snow Shoe, on Monday evening, there was nobody present but John Uzzle; John, however, kept them in good spirits. This is a big campaign of Brown and Batchelor.

——The organization of the Fifth Regiment N. G. is as follows:

Colonel—James F. Milliken, Hollidaysburg.
Lieut. Colonel—P. Benner Wilson, Bellefonte.
Major—T. W. Hamilton, Huntingdon Furnace.
Adjutant—J. Irvin Brotherline, Hollidaysburg (1st Lieut.)
Quartermaster—John T. M. Thompson, Lewistown (1st Lieut.)
Commissary—J. I. Rankin, Bellefonte (1st Lieut.)
Paymaster—W. W. Vanormer, Schellsburg (Capt.)
Surgeon—W. C. Roller, Hollidaysburg (Captain.)
Assistant Surgeons—James B. Statler, Schellsburg, and George R. Orlady, Huntingdon (1st Lieut.)
Segrt. Major—Con. Corry Q. M. Sergt—Elijah Estep. Com. Sergt.—E. Locke. Hospital Steward—G. S. Rifle. Drum Major—Thomas Lloyd. Band Master—Espy Gallipher.
Company A—Ebensburg, Capt., S. W. Davis.
Company B—Bellefonte, 1st Lieut., O. W. VanValin.
Company C—Schellsburg, Captain, W. W. Vanormer.
Company D—Altoona, Captain, T. F. Burchfield.
Company E—Philipsburg, Captain, George C. Davison.
Company F—Hollidaysburg, Captain James Rodgers.
Company G—Lewistown, Captain J. M. Nolte
Company H—Wilmore, Captain, P. J. Wolcalagle.
Company I—Bedford, Captain, S. F. Statler.

GREEN'S AUGUST FLOWER.—It is natural for people suffering with Dyspepsia and Liver Complaint or any derangements of the digestive organs, such as Sour Stomach, Sick Headache, Habitual Costiveness, Palpitation of the Heart, Heart-burn, Water-brash, gnawing and burning pains at the pit of the Stomach, Yellow Skin, Coated Tongue, and disagreeable taste in the mouth, coming up of food after eating, low spirits, &c., to put off from day to day buying an article that they know has cured their neighbor, friend, or relative, yet they have no faith in it until it is too late. But if you will go to your Druggists, F. P. Green and J. Zeller & son and get a bottle of GREEN'S AUGUST FLOWER your immediate cure is as as certain as your life. Sample Bottles of this medicine can be obtained for 10 cents to try its superior virtue.

Regular size 75 cents. Try it, two doses will relieve you.
